15,000 Rightists Routed by Police In Paris Fighting

16 Persons Are Seized After Street Battle; Scores Injured.

Blum Urges Foes To Bury Hatchet

Riots in 2 Other Cities; Streets Are Guarded at Aix-En-Provence.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 5.—Police and mobile guards fought Rightists, estimated officially to number 15,000, along the Champs Elysees tonight.

Scores of civilians were reported injured. A police statement said 31 officers were hurt and that 16 persons were arrested.

Demonstrators, fleeing after the encounter, took refuge in cafes, where they hurled chairs, canes and bottles from terraces at the pursuing police.

In the Champs Elysees clash, Nationalists, in a daily demonstration against the Blum government, fought to break through the solid ranks of a thousand steel-helmeted mobile guards, police and mounted republican guards.

Many Sunday strollers were caught in the crush. Cafes along the avenue hastily closed their doors.

Reinforcements Rushed.

Mobile guard reinforcements were rushed into action when the ranks of the demonstrators swelled to occupy the entire street.

At Doual, Rightists and Leftists clashed. A cafe window was smashed, one person was injured and several were arrested.

Fighting between Rightists and Leftists broke out at Nimes, following a veterans' meeting. Police restored order quickly.

After the Champs Elysees clash, a group of Rightists barricaded themselves in a cafe and threw chairs and other missiles at pursuers.

Several policemen and demonstrators were injured before police reinforcements quelled the rioters.

The Paris skirmish started after the National Union of Veterans had held their traditional services at the tomb of the unknown soldier beneath the Arc de Triomphe.

Mobile guards patrolled the streets of Aix-en-Provence, scene of sharp Leftist-Rightist gunfighting, today while Premier Leon Blum urged opposing political factions to bury the hatchet.

Eight persons were wounded and several arrested at Aix-en-Provence last night.

Blum, speaking at Annecy, called attention to the troubled situation in Europe.

"The time has come to get hold of ourselves," he said. "To keep her friendships and alliances and to play peacemaker in drifting Europe France, more than ever, needs order and discipline within; prestige and authority without."

A government spokesman at a Beauvais celebration of the "immense peaceful revolution" by the People's Front likewise warned against disorder.

He was Raoul Aubaud, undersecretary of the interior.

Internal disturbances, he said, "might compromise results achieved and prepare the way for fascism."

A steady decline in the countryside strikes was reported. Strikers still out were estimated officially at 113,000.

War Chest Raised.

Speaking at Creil, Minister of the Interior Roger Salengro told a Socialist meeting of "reports" that industrialists had raised a "war chest" in an effort to topple the People's Front government.

Declaring he did "not wish to believe it true," Salengro promised, however, the government would not be caught napping if the employers tried to "torpedo" Blum's program.

Salengro said the government was "sure," after the employers signed a blanket agreement with the General Confederation of Labor, that the industrialists were resolved to "make an effort and do nothing which might interfere with the government's program."

He added: "But now strange maneuvers are reported.

"The government is resolved to begin a fight which will end in our victory."

Goodyear Balloon Apparent Winner

Denver, July 5 (AP).—The Goodyear entrant from Akron, Ohio, landed safely near Presho, S. Dak., today as the apparent winner of the Twenty-fourth National Balloon Race.

Four other balloons, which, with the Goodyear, went aloft here Friday night, came to earth in Colorado yesterday.

The bag landing the greatest distance from the original take-off position is the winner.

James Ewing, an official of the balloon race, announced the Goodyear entrant, piloted by Frank A. Trotter, also landed in Colorado, near Sterling, yesterday, but cast off again unannounced. Rules of the race allow participants to land if they cast off within 15 minutes.

Trotter's reported landing near Sterling caused Maj. W. J. Flood, operations officer in charge of the race, to announce all the 35,000 cubic foot bags had completed their competition within a radius of less than 120 miles from Denver. (Presho, the Weather Bureau in Denver estimated, is 385 miles northeast of here).

Swiss Autoists Strike Against High Gas Tax

Berne, Switzerland, July 5 (AP). A one-day "automobile strike" kept private cars off Switzerland's highways today. The "strike" was in protest against the high cost of gasoline—about 62 cents a gallon—more than half of which is due to import duties.

Motorcyclists joined in the protest. Only doctors' cars and commercial trucks operated, while automobile owners walked to meetings held at auto clubs.

Reich Seeking Pact Revision, Geneva Fears

Demand for 'Free Danzig' Believed Step Toward New Versailles.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, July 5.—A Nazi's demand for virtual Danzig secession from all League of Nations control provoked concern today lest Germany was taking her first step toward actual territorial revision of the Treaty of Versailles.

That was the reaction in some Geneva quarters to the startling speech before the League Council yesterday by Dr. Arthur Karl Greiser, president of the Danzig senate—a speech accompanied by nose-thumbing at newspapermen and climaxed by a brisk Nazi salute.

Greiser said he spoke for the German people.

Observers, pointing to the League's weakness as disclosed by the Italo-Ethiopian affair, said there was a possibility the free territory might eventually cut off all ties with the League, her sponsor, and proclaim annexation to Germany, her Fatherland.

Logical Sequence.

The Journal Des Nations conceived this logical sequence to Geneva's capitulation to Italy, as evidenced by the Assembly last night in its decision to turn its back on the Ethiopian question.

"The revision before us is a menacing one," the newspaper said.

Some statesmen, moreover, appeared openly apprehensive of the Danzig problem.

One member of the council said privately:

"The League of Nations suffered an atrocious defeat in the Italo-Ethiopian crisis.

"The reality, put into slogan form, is the League is besieged by Italy and Germany.'

"In a more vital aim of preserving European peace, the League had to abandon Ethiopia.

Paths Open for Peace.

"We had to leave the paths open for peace and for collaboration with the League by Italy and Germany."

At the same time, a political fight appeared on the horizon over the question of League reform.

France and Russia want to strengthen the League by military sanctions and regional ententes.

Many small nations, on the other hand, want to see the League's activities restricted to consultation and conciliation.

Tomorrow the committee on coordination of 52 nations will meet to arrange for the lifting of sanctions from Italy.

The council itself decided not to close its session, and may meet again at any time simply upon the call of Anthony Eden, British foreign secertary.

Last night the council, in secret session, decided the Danzig problem should be handled calmly, but firmly, and asked Great Britain, France and Portugal to follow the situation closely.

Party Forces Rallied to Win Women Vote

Berry Says 2,000,000 Workers Are Enrolled to Aid Roosevelt.

Townsendites Gathering for Parley to Study Lemke Candidacy.

By William V. Nesly.

Intensified politics, following up the wave of partisan oratory that swept across the country over the holiday, was in sight for the Nation today as party leaders opened a week of concentrated efforts looking to the vote harvest in November.

Women and labor received special attention over the week-end.

Democratic National Committee headquarters announced formation of an all-volunteer feminine speakers' bureau with Mrs. Charles W. Tillet, of Charlotte, N. C., at its head. At the same time, John D. M. Hamilton, Republican national chairman, selected Miss Margaret J. Eaton, of Flushing, Long Island, to be in charge of young women's activities as co-director of the Young Republican Eastern Division.

A special division of women "grass tramplers" to "go from county to county with local leaders helping to interpret national policy in its relation to local problems," was announced yesterday by Miss Mary W. Dewson, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee in charge of women's activities. She said the "grass tramplers" idea was born long before the Republican "grass roots" convention at Springfield, Ill., last June.

Meanwhile, Labor's Non-Partisan League, headed by Maj. George L. Berry, issued a statement asserting labor leaders representing organizations with more than 2,000,000 voting members have enrolled in the league to back President Roosevelt for re-election.

Farley Likely to Quit.

There were other political developments, including these:

Postmaster General James A. Farley prepared to confer with President Roosevelt again today on the political campaign, and it was considered not unlikely that his retirement from the Cabinet, at least for the period of the campaign, will be announced after the conference.

Gov. Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential nominee, was back in Topeka, Kans., ready for the special session of the Legislature which he called for today to consider a social security amendment to the State constitution. There were indications that efforts would be made to introduce other legislation and upset the Governor's plan to complete the special session this week, but Republican leaders said they could defeat the move.

Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, American Minister to Denmark, returned to the United States yesterday to campaign for the Democratic ticket. She told the Associated Press in New York that "I am sure of victory for President Roosevelt."

Townsendites Gather.

Townsend clubs in many sections of the country were reported demanding affiliation with the Union Party, headed by Representative William Lemke, as leaders of the movement started gathering at Cleveland for the national convention of the Townsendites opening July 15. They have insisted that 50,000 followers of the movement will flock to the convention.

Labor's Non-Partisan League was formed last April by Berry, John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. In its statement yesterday the league said that analysis of the membership acceptances to date "indicates active and widespread support by labor of the President's policies as they affect the worker."

Declaring the 2,000,000 claimed voters "an astonishing enrollment" in view of the brief period the league has been organized, Maj. Berry declared it "attests pointedly the enthusiasm of labor for the cause to which we are pledged."

He said the "vigor and sincerity" of the communications from labor leaders presage "an active and forceful campaign for President Roosevelt's re-election."

The statement said a national ex-

Oh, Sir, Where's Our Baby?

Parents Fail to Find Baby, 'Swapped' to In-Laws on Trip

Police Join in Game of Hide and Seek, Without Avail; 2 Families Head Back to Ohio, Hoping for Eventual Reunion at Home.

It was not a kidnaping—the case of 17-month-old Florence Hoffman—but it was just as exciting.

And despite heroic efforts by Washington's police and their radio broadcasts, Mr. and Mrs. John Hoffman started back to their home at Cleveland without their baby, Florence.

The Hoffmans' plight was not really serious, because Florence was in the automobile of Mrs. Hoffman's brother, John Krafcik, and another brother, Andrew, 9, was in the Hoffmans' car—sort of a hostage.

It was all the result of a holiday trip to Washington. Leaving Cleveland early Saturday were Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman and Florence. Accompanying them, in another car, were John Krafcik, Mrs. Hoffman's mother, Mrs. Pauline Krafcik; her two sisters, Eugenia and Monica Krafcik, and Andrew.

The trip proceeded smoothly until the two cars reached Tarentum, Pa., Saturday afternoon. There the Krafcik family decided to make an exchange of passengers. The Krafciks agreed to swap Andrew for his baby cousin. Just on a temporary basis, of course.

So Florence went into the Krafcik car with her aunts and grandmother. And her cousin went into the Hoffman car.

But Hoffman's coupe, seized with engine trouble, lagged behind the other car and finally bogged down

5 New Suspects Seized by U. S. In Bond Thefts

Attempt to Pass $200,000 of Stolen Certificates Leads to Arrest.

Arrest of five men and recovery of an additional $200,000 in United States Treasury bonds in New York City were announced yesterday by the Federal Bureau of Investigation as the final act in its solution of the theft of $1,456,000 in bonds on January 28, 1935, from the Bank of Manhattan Trust Co. in that city.

Bonds to the face value of $750,000 previously had been recovered and 11 persons had been taken into custody.

The men arrested, according to the announcement of J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the bureau, were Morris Reisner, Dave Berman, Moe Sedway, Ben Espy and Jack Green. They will be arraigned in New York this morning.

The quintet, arrested soon after the two $100,000 bonds were recovered Friday, had been attempting to negotiate the certificates. J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the bureau, said here yesterday.

"Reisner, Berman, Sedway, Green, and Epsy have been under investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation for some time in connection with their participation in these thefts," Hoover said. "They

Arthur Ferguson, U. S. Tariff Expert Found Dead in Tub

Arthur Ferguson, 62, dye and textile expert for the Federal Tariff Commission, was found dead in a bathtub at his home, 3152 Adams Mill Road northwest, early last night by Ray W. Olson, a roomer at the house.

Ferguson's head and shoulders were submerged in the half-filled tub. The rest of his body was outside the tub.

He was pronounced dead by Dr. A. M. Horne of Emergency Hospital. Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, later examined the body and ordered it held for autopsy this morning.

Neighbors said Ferguson had been despondent since the sudden death from heart disease of his wife on January 22 of this year. She also was found dead in their home by Olson.

On Ferguson's bed, officers said, lay a half-finished, complicated mathematical problem and a book.

His relatives have not been located. He and his wife, it was understood, had no children.

Idle 'Quoddy Camp Transfer Up to Roosevelt

RA or Veterans Agency Due to Obtain Facilities as Project Faces End.

By the Associated Press.

Plans to abandon, at least temporarily, the Passamaquoddy Bay tidal project in Maine and convert the construction camp there into a vetministration project were disclosed erans hospital or Resettlement Ad- yesterday in authoritative quarters.

With money to continue the tide-harnessing project refused by Congress, President Roosevelt was said to plan a definite decision on what to do with the model village built to house the Passamaquoddy workers later this month.

At one time the $7,000,000 work relief allotment to start the huge project had 5,000 men at work. Army engineers spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in constructing homes and barracks, but they are now almost deserted.

The additional $9,000,000 requested for Passamaquoddy was refused by Congress at the time it rejected a regular appropriation for the Florida ship canal. No allotment from the $1,425,000,000 new relief appropriation is expected because of a provision forbidding any expenditures on projects which cannot be

Engineer Is Killed, 100 Escape Injury In Detroit Wreck

Detroit, July 5 (AP).—The engineer was burned to death and nearly 100 passengers escaped serious injury today when a Detroit-bound Michigan Central passenger train from Chicago ploughed through an open switch and rammed the rear end of a freight train near Suburban Wayne.

James Smeed, 61, of Detroit, engineer on the passenger train, died in a hospital several hours after the wreck. The Fireman, Floyd E. Dennis, 46, of Jackson, Mich., escaped with minor injuries after he was trapped in the coal tender for three hours. Workmen with torches cut him free.

The body of Henry Robertson, 36, of Chicago, was found near the tracks a half mile from the scene of the accident. Deputy Coroner Foster Knobloch expressed the belief Robertson was a passenger on the wrecked train and was electrocuted when he stepped onto a live wire while walking to a nearby town.

State Relief To Aid Labor In Steel Drive

Lieut.Gov.Kennedy Says Pennsylvania Will Help Evicted.

A.F.L. Executive Group Meets Thursday on Industrial Union.

By the Associated Press.

Homestead, Pa., July 5.—The steel workers, organizing committee opened its drive to unionize the $5,000,000,000 industry today under a pledge of Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy of Pennsylvania to provide relief for any who might lose their jobs.

"This is a peaceful, organized drive and we do not seek any strikes or trouble," said Kennedy, "but if the steel magnates throw you out you are entitled to and will receive State relief."

The lieutenant governor also is secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, under whose leadership the unionization program began.

Striking out at company unions as "illegitimate sons—kept organizations—of the steel trust," Kennedy told the mass meeting the "economic royalists of the basic industries" had forced long hours and low wages upon the workers only because they were unorganized.

Memorial to 1892 Dead.

The meeting was announced as a memorial to strikers of Homestead in 1892 who lost their lives in the bloody "Battle of the Barges" which brought State intervention and the first defeat in the three major attempts so far made to unionize the industry.

There was a crowd estimated by police at 3,000 to 6,000 in a vacant lot before a temporary stand to hear the speakers.

Clinton S. Golden, regional director of the organizing committee, declared the crowd "very good, in view of the general fear of spies and of the fact that the mills were kept operating today for the first time on a Sunday in seven years."

Kennedy said the condition in the steel industry "is the same today as that of the anthracite industry from 1887 to 1901, when the United Mine Workers were organizing it."

"All Stood Together."

"We all stood together then, regardless of race or nationality," he said, "and there is not one non-union man working in that great industry now.

"All we need to bring about such a state in the steel industry is inspired leadership and a determination to win. You have the inspired leadership here before you now and in the person of that great leader of the working man, John L. Lewis."

He referred to the president of the United Mine Workers, who faces the executive council of the American Federation of Labor in Washington Thursday because of his insistence on a vertical unionization by industries rather than the prevailing organization by crafts backed by William Green, A. F. of L. president, and the executive council.

After the speaking the crowd trooped to the Homestead Cemetery five blocks away to lay wreaths on the graves of men who died in the 1892 fracas.

Industry Gives Warning.

An ultimatum from William A. Irvin, president of the $2,000,000,000 United States Steel Corporation, and similar defiant declarations of heads of other units of the great industry in recent days gave warning that steel would not wait supinely for the union organizers to enter their plants.

"The United States Steel Corporation always has stood for the open shop and will continue to do so," said a statement by Irvin in New York.

"It will never require employes to belong to any union to gain employment. On the contrary, it will defend their right to work free from outside interference and coercion."

The tenor of this statement and those by Eugene Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel; Benjamin Fairless, president of Carnegie Steel, and others, coincided in virtually every respect.

Philip Murray, chairman of Lewis'

Kin of 3 Bachelor Brothers To Search for New Gold Hoard

By the Associated Press.

Tiston, Iowa, July 5.—A hunt for hidden treasure even greater than the $212,000 gold hoard already uncovered was organized tonight at the 880-acre farm of the three woman-hating Iwers brothers.

Seventeen relatives prepared to press the search and to claim a share of the gold in court proceedings.

Declaring a firm belief that larger sums remained to be found, the 17 announced they would file suit to annul the will of the last of the three bachelor brothers, the late Henry Iwers. He left all his estate to the two cousins who last week found part of the hoard in two iron boxes.

The reason for the hunt for more money—expected to start early this week—was disclosed by J. C. France, attorney for one group of the dissatisfied heirs.

"All of the money and gold certificates located up to now have been of the old large type," he said. "We know that Henry and John Iwers handled large sums since new bills were issued more than five years ago.

"The two brothers rented most of the 880-acre farm. They had mortgages and income from bonds. They kept only an insignificant bank account. When they cashed checks or coupons, they took currency. That money is somewhere, but it hasn't turned up yet."

Attorney France said the legal action to break the Iwer's will and remove one of the lucky cousins, Louis Voss, as Administrator of the estate, would be based on a charge that Voss and his wife, Margaret—the other beneficiary of the will—had not taken proper care of Henry Iwers before he died last year at the age of 74.

Voss and his wife did not find the treasure chest until last week, although the countryside had echoed for years with tales of "a lot of money buried about the place."

The three Iwers bachelors, William, John and Henry, had lived and died in stark simplicity, with tight lips. They seldom conversed with others. They never talked of their personal affairs. Their home

Thousands Quit Parched Farms, Take WPA Jobs

2,119 in North Dakota Start Work Today as Rain Hopes Fade.

Nebraska Churches Pray for Showers

Relief Heads to Confer With Roosevelt on Aid Program.

By the Associated Press.

Bismarck, N. D., July 5.—Thousands of farmers in the fertile Northwest abandoned drought-ruined fields tonight and turned to WPA jobs for a livelihood.

While a scorching sun seared away all hope of drenching rains for at least three more days, hands that should have been harvesting reached for picks and shovels.

In North Dakota, where week-end temperatures boomed along at 100 degrees and above, 2,119 men prepared to shift from farmer-producers to laborer-consumers tomorrow. Hundreds more were to be added to relief projects as the week progressed until the State's quota of 10,000 was filled.

The farmer would at least have the satisfaction of improving his roads to market while he worked for the WPA, Administrator Will G. Metz, of Wyoming, declared. He said rural highways and water development projects would employ most idle farmhands in his State, beginning with 400 to 600 men tomorrow and building up to 1,500 by the close of July.

500 Start Work At Once.

Five hundred farmers were ready for WPA jobs with the coming of dawn. Three thousand more were to be at work in Montana "within the next few days," Deputy Administrator C. W. Fowler said.

In Washington, Federal relief officials were ready to lay before President Roosevelt an outline of measures they will take to aid the drought sufferers.

Churchgoers in Nebraska—where no WPA allotment has yet been made for drought relief—prayed for rain after the mercury zipped up to a new all-time high for July at Omaha, 110 degrees.

The weather forecaster pored over his maps at Chicago, but could see no sign of rain that would amount to anything "for two or three days anyway."

Final Two Weeks.

Thus the final two weeks which United States Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace said would determine whether the 1936 drought, already critical, would reach the depths of the 1934 disaster, began ominously.

Masses of hot, dry air continued to pour in from the Pacific over the whole Midwest. Northeast winds blowing off Lake Michigan kept Chicago comparatively cool, but blistering weather reigned in Montana, Wyoming, the Dakotas, Minnesota, Nebraska, Kansas, eastern Colorado, Missouri, Iowa, Illinois and Indiana.

Sioux City, S. Dak., thermometers registered an all-high for any time of year, 110 degrees, over the week-end.

It was 108 degrees at Des Moines, Ia., Kansas City, Mo., Valentine, Nebr., and Huron, S. D. Bismarck reported 98, Miles City; Mont., 100; Sheridan, Wyo., 109; Moorhead, Minn., 90; Oklahoma City, 100; St. Louis, Mo., 100; Peoria, Ill., 108, and Canton, Ill., 107.

Rain in East, South.

The East and the South were covered with showers over the week-end, and conditions were improved in drought hit sections of the Southeast.

Waters were subsiding in the south Texas flood region, with 26 dead and property loss estimated at $3,500,000.

The "rain makers" of the Navajo Indian tribes resorted to their ancient ritual for relief for dry reservations in Arizona.

The hot weather belt stretched into Alaska, sending the temperatures into the 90's.

Report to President.

Government relief officials prepared yesterday to lay before President Roosevelt today or tomorrow a detailed report of the serious Midwestern drought and measures they are ready to take to aid farmers.

Out of this conference, it was indicated, will come a complete,

DR. W. A. R. GOODWIN, rector of Bruton Parish, Va., where President Roosevelt worshipped yesterday, occupying a chair used by British Governors of Colonial Virginia.

Historic Parish Holds Services For Roosevelt

President Attends Worship at 200-Year-Old Altar at Williamsburg.

By the Associated Press.

Williamsburg, Va., July 5.—Sitting in the carved chair of the royal British governors of Colonial Virginia, President Roosevelt today attended worship in the old brick church of Bruton Parish.

With Mrs. Roosevelt by his side, the President faced the church's 200-year-old altar, before which stood the original baptismal fount used by the settlers at Jamestown.

Greeted at the door by the Rev. Dr. W. A. R. Goodwin, the rector, the President was reminded that Bruton was the church of Patrick Henry, Washington, Jefferson, Monroe and Madison and that eight Presidents of the United States before him had occupied the same old chair.

Old Prayer Offered.

"From the west gallery of this church," said Dr. Goodwin, "Jefferson dreamed his first dreams of political freedom, and Washington, during the days when the breach between Britain and the colonies was widening, wrote in his diary that he fasted and attended service at Bruton Parish."

As text for his sermon, Dr. Goodwin used the prayer offered at Jamestown at the opening of the first legislative assembly ever to meet in America—"Men's affairs do but little prosper where God's service is neglected."

Dr. Goodwin asked the congregation to dedicate themselves "to supreme purpose of reviving in this country the old faith of the fathers."

A few blocks away, the flag of Great Britain was flying from the steeple of the old Royal Capitol, which has been restored as it was in the days when the Virginia House of Burgesses decided that taxation without representation was tyranny and there drew up their famous resolutions.

Mr. Roosevelt had passed under the flags of three governments during his week-end tour of Virginia. Besides the British royal ensign and the American flag, the Confederate banner floated from several flag-

Soviet Youth Battles Icy Sea In Boat Loaded With 10 Bodies

By the Associated Press.

Archangel, U. S. S. R., July 5.—Twenty-year-old Ivan Krukhoff related today the story of a grim voyage through the wild and icy waters of the White Sea—with a cargo of dead men.

Krukhoff was the lone survivor of a party of 12, all members of a scientific expedition. He reached safety in a lifeboat loaded with the bodies of ten of the others. The eleventh body was not recovered.

Thousands of persons attended a mass funeral yesterday for the victims.

The 12, headed by Hydrographer G. Bardinoff, left the expedition's steamer Toros on June 2 in a small boat to make a study of the depth of the sea between Archangel and Kandalashka Bay, on a route crossing the Arctic Circle.

"After three days' work," said the youth, "we decided to return to the ship.

"We were caught by a storm. Mountainous waves capsized the boat and swept away the oars, equipment and our comrade Nikolai Fedoseyeff, whom we never saw again.

"Struggling in the water, the rest of us with great difficulty managed to right the boat and climb in.

"Then for a day and a night we were the prey of a furious sea.

"We had no oars; we tried frantically to row with our hands.

"The boat constantly shipped water. We scooped it out with our hands and our caps.

"It was horribly cold. One after another, my companions died of exposure and exhaustion until I was left alone with ten bodies.

"The sea grew rougher and it was only by tying my right wrist to the oarlock that I was able to stick to the boat.

"The bodies of my companions remained in the bottom of the boat where I had placed them, but I was several times washed overboard, being held fast only by my lashed wrist."

When picked up by the Toros, the boat still held the bodies and the unconscious survivor.

The dead men were buried in the same grave. The government will build a monument over it and provide 5,000 rubles ($1,000) to the family of each.

U. S. Toll 251, Heaviest on 4th In Last 5 Years

All But Five Were Killed in Accidents, Drownings in 41 States.

By the Associated Press.

The Nation's celebration of its 160th birthday took the heaviest July 4 toll in five years.

Deaths were counted at 251—more than one and a half for every year of United States independence.

Banging firecrackers played a comparatively innocent role, taking only five lives in three States, but motoring accidents and drownings rolled up a terrific toll.

Not since 1931, when 483 celebrators died, was the death list so long.

All but 7 of the 48 States—Colorado, Delaware, Mississippi, Nevada, New Mexico, Vermont and Wyoming—reported fatalities.

Variety of Accidents.

Airplane crashes, auto races, lightning, railroad trains, burning buildings, celebrators' wild bullets and tavern brawls all made their contributions.

Traffic accidents were responsible for the most deaths, accounting for 149 lives in 36 States. Seventy-five persons were drowned in 36 States. Miscellaneous tragedies accounted for 22 more in 15 States.

Although fireworks fatalities were low, burns and injuries were legion across the land.

In New York City, 591 persons were treated at hospitals for fireworks burns. Two fires were started during the celebration, and one man was killed by a stray bullet as he stood on a rooftop.

A 6-year-old girl, burned to death by a firecracker thrown into her lap, was Chicago's only fatality. Sixty-two others were hurt and 11 arrested. A small dog, maddened by exploding firecrackers, bit three persons at Montrose Avenue Beach.

Two Die in Michigan.

Two men were killed at Lexington, Mich., when fireworks blew up on a scow during the annual celebration there. Sixteen spectators at a community fireworks display at Findlay, Ohio, were hurt by a noise bomb that shot across the river into the crowd instead of rising in air as expected.

St. Louis counted its fireworks injuries at 343, and reported one dead from a tavern brawl.

Kansas City's antifirecracker ordinance cut injuries there to 100. There were no deaths.

At Los Angeles, Patricia Kramer, 42, put a firecracker in her mouth and lit it. She was badly burned. Theodore Clothen, 19, slipped and sat down on a cannon cracker and went to a hospital. Eighty others were injured.

Increase in China Garrisons Denied

Peiping, July 5 (AP).—Gen. Kanichiro Tashiro, ranking Japanese army officer in North China, said today Japan had no intention of further augmenting her Peiping and Tientsin garrisons.

The garrisons, he added, have a total of but 4,000 troops, despite contradictory reports in foreign circles.

Gen. Tashiro also said Japan intended to construct no more barracks in addition to those at Fengtai, Peiping and Tientsin, "unless the situation warranted it."

"Japan is so close to China it can, unlike other powers, get reinforcements here quickly if necessary," he added.

The Japanese commander said the Communist situation in North China still required constant vigilance on the part of Japan to prevent the reds from entering Manchukuo or Inner Mongolia, where it was feared they might join Bolsheviks and interfere with Japan's plans.

finished entirely with funds on hand.

The construction camp, located near Eastport, Me., was said by officials to be ideal for either a veterans hospital or a suburban community similar to those now being built by the Resettlement Administration.

Although tentative plans for its utilization were said to have been worked out by both Resettlement and the Veterans' Administration, officials hinted there was a possibility that it might be used for some other Government activity.

Planned to Harness Tides.

Plans to generate electrical power from the high tides prevalent on that section of the Maine coast were prepared by Dexter P. Cooper, who subsequently was retained as consulting engineer on the project. Two huge reservoirs were planned to impound the water at high tide, which was to be released gradually until the ebb.

An unexpected difficulty, however, arose when engineers discovered that geological conditions made it impossible to construct the supplementary reservoir intended to provide a flow of water at ebb tide. Their recommendation that a stand-by steam or Diesel generating plant be built drew from Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, who led the attack on the proposed appropriation in the Congressional session just closed, the assertion that it would have been cheaper to eliminate the tidal generation plans entirely.

Lack of a market for the power, which friends of the project said would be provided by new industries, also was asserted by Vandenberg in his attacks.

Politics and People

U. S. Taxes $32 Per Capita Last Year; Heaviest Since Post-War Days.

By Franklyn Waltman

PRACTICALLY speaking, the United States Treasury in the last fiscal year took a larger sum out of the pockets of the people of this country as a whole than in any year since the period immediately after the World War, when heavy levies on large excess war profits swelled the Federal revenue.

WALTMAN.

In the 12 months which ended June 30 the Treasury collected $4,116,000,000—$32 for each man, woman, child and baby in the Nation. It was a larger sum than the Treasury had collected in any 12-month period since the 1930 fiscal year. It was larger than the total collected in either the 1928 or the 1929 fiscal years.

In the fiscal year 1930, the collection year for taxes assessed against the huge profits accruing from the peak of the stock market boom and business activity, the Treasury collected $4,178,000,000, or only $62,000,000 more than the total revenue in the last fiscal year.

Revenue in the 1930 fiscal year was larger than in any fiscal year since 1921, when it totaled $5,624,000,000. In 1920 the total collected was $6,694,000,000—the largest sum ever collected by the Treasury in one fiscal year. After 1921 progressive reductions were made in the high rates of taxation assessed during the war period.

Since 1921 there have been only two years—1930 and 1927—when the Treasury receipts have been larger than in the last fiscal year. In one case it was $62,000,000 larger and in the other $13,000,000. Still the statement remains true that in the last 12 months the Treasury took a larger sum out of the pockets of the people than in any year since 1921.

In 1927 and 1930 more than one-half of the total of Federal receipts came from income taxes from individuals and corporations. In 1930, for instance, income taxes supplied $2,410,000,000 of the $4,178,000,000 collected that year. In the last fiscal year income tax collections totaled only $1,426,000,000 out of a total of $4,116,000,000, less than 35 per cent of the total.

Thus the tax burden has become more diversified and the man in the street who does not pay an income tax and he who pays but a small-income tax are actually contributing more to the expenses of the Federal Government than ever before, even though they do not realize it—and the rich proportionately are contributing less, although they may be paying more on a comparatively smaller income.

Aside from that observation, Treasury receipts for previous years are cited here to demonstrate that as far as revenue goes the Federal Government has reached normalcy. Herbert Hoover's first deficit was caused, not by increased expenditures, but a severe shrinkage in revenue. Had his Administration been able to collect as much in the fiscal year 1931 as the New Deal did in the last 12 months, there would have been no deficit that year.

But despite the fact that revenue yields have again reached normal levels, the New Deal ended the last fiscal year with a deficit of $4,764,000,000 (if the statutory debt retirement payments for the year are deducted the net deficit would be $4,361,000,000). This represents the sixth successive Treasury deficit with a seventh for the current year in prospect.

These deficits, including debt retirement payments, were:

1932	3,148,000,000
1933	3,063,000,000
1934	3,989,000,000
1935	3,575,000,000
1936	4,764,000,000
Total	$19,441,000,000

Debt retirement payments for the six years totaled $2,650,000,000. Deducting that sum from the total deficit for six years we have the figure of $16,791,000,000 representing the sum spent in excess of receipts. At least $2,300,000,000 will be added to that total in the current year, making the accumulated deficit for what might be termed our seven lean years approximately $19,000,000,000.

The important thing about this tabulation of deficits is that they not only continue from year to year but that the deficit for the past year was larger than for any other year, despite the steadily increasing revenue total. And there is no guarantee that the deficit for the current year may not be as large as that for the year just ended.

It will be remembered that President Roosevelt in his budget message to Congress in January, 1934, held out the promise of a balanced budget during the last fiscal year, asserting that the Government "should plan to bring its 1936 expenditures, including recovery and relief, within the revenues expected in the fiscal year 1936."

"We should plan," the President told Congress, "to have a definitely balanced budget for the third year of recovery (1936) and from that time on seek a continuing reduction of the national debt."

When Mr. Roosevelt two and one-half years ago uttered those words he undoubtedly meant them—but he soon found that having started a generous relief program he could not stop it. And his aspirations were further thrown out of range when Congress, undoubtedly due in large part to the spending spree on which the New Deal had embarked, refused to be restrained in paying the soldiers' bonus.

Now the President does not talk about a specific date for bringing about a balanced budget. Perhaps he fears—as do many of his countrymen—that he has started things which he cannot stop.

And yet the analysis in this place during the last three days of Federal finances makes it clear that it is only by sharply curtailing expenses that the budget can be brought into balance. Failure to do that, not this year or perhaps the next, but as certainly as night follows day, will result in overwhelming disaster for the Nation.

ecutive board of the league would be set up soon, composed of officers of the national and international unions, to direct actual operations nationally. State organizations are well under way and State chairmen soon will be announced.

Gov. Landon will not devote all his time to the special legislative session this week. Tomorrow, the Associated Press reports, he will confer at Topeka with Representative Joseph W. Martin, of Massachusetts, in charge of the party's Eastern division headquarters.

On Thursday he will meet former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois. With Lowden he will discuss the farm problem, with which he will deal in his speech accepting the Presidential nomination on July 23. The Governor on Saturday and yesterday made a number of platform appearances before crowds that had gathered to greet him as he returned to Topeka from his Colorado vacation.

Miss Eaton, chosen to direct young women's activities for the Young Republicans organization in the East, will have headquarters with the Republican Eastern committee in New York and will travel extensively in the East, enlisting young women in the Landon-Knox cause.

This week will see the setting up of headquarters by the national committees of both parties, only a block apart, in New York City.

On Thursday the Democratic committee will move its main offices from Washington to the Hotel Biltmore, where two floors have been taken over for the national campaign staff. In the next block Martin will open the Republicans' Eastern offices, where a staff of 200 persons will be employed. In the same general area both the Republican and Democratic State committees will have their State campaign headquarters.

Mrs. Owen Sees Victory.

New York, July 5 (AP).—Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, American Minister to Denmark, came home today to campaign for the Democratic national ticket and to announce "for the record" that "I am sure of victory for President Roosevelt."

Tact and diplomacy cloaked the conversation as the daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan discussed the part she would take in the campaign. Asserting her speaking plans would be held in abeyance, she said:

"That's up to the Democratic committee. I am at their disposal. I intend first to take a vacation and then start on a speaking tour."

Minister to Denmark for a little more than three years, Mrs. Owen observed that President Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy and "his reciprocal treaties" have produced a helpful reaction in foreign countries.

Finds Denmark Successful.

Of Denmark she said:

"Denmark has solved her agricultural problem by farm co-operatives. Denmark is serving as a laboratory for study; the old age pension and unemployment insurance systems are successful.

"It does not minimize her success to say these systems work simpler there than they would in the United States."

The woman known as "Madam Minister" to associates spoke cautiously of the possibility of a woman candidate for the vice Presidency in 1940.

"What has sex to do with it?" she said. "Appropriateness of the candidate is what counts. Let us always analyze the requirements of the post."

Italy Fortifying North Border, Austrians Told

War Between Duce's Army, Yugoslavia Is Feared as Tension Grows.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, July 5.—Reports among Austrian gendarmes and soldiers that Italy is throwing up a complex system of Brenner Pass fortifications heightened the uneasiness over that well-watched border today.

Yugoslavs were further concerned about Italian artillery and infantry movements near the Italo-Yugoslavia border, although these were described as routine maneuvers.

The Tyrol was agitated by many rumors, among them the following:

1. That Italian civilians, under officers, are constructing a network of military supply roads, heavy artillery emplacements reached by protected thoroughfares 26 feet wide, strategic bomb-proof shelters and munitions dumps.

2. That a camouflaged airdrome has been erected on Sandjochale Peak.

3. That a line of fortifications is being completed 15 miles long and at an average altitude of 8,856 feet.

4. That seven stations for infantry and artillery are being built on another peak.

Despite Italian assurances recent frontier military activities are "maneuvers," a "war psychosis" has been developing in northwestern Yugoslavia.

The Zagreb newspaper Istra recently said persons in the area around Trieste had expressed fears of a coming Italo-Yugoslav war.

Travelers passing through the region say increasing tension is apparent as one approaches and crosses the Italian line, and that natives wonder excitedly about Italian plans.

Austrians near the Brenner Pass hear—and agitatedly pass from mouth to mouth — many reports from Italian territory that once belonged to Austria:

That between May 20 and June 10, 30 Italian general staff officers conferred at the border town of Gossensass, ostensibly about fortifying the strategic Brenner Pass.

That 20 officers gathered in Gossensass in June to form a general commission for determining points about border defense.

That barracks at Gossensass and Sterzing were ordered rebuilt and made ready for use on June 28, and that farmers in the region were instructed to finish harvesting by June 15 because the land was needed for maneuvers.

Rome, July 5 (AP).—Usually well-informed sources today ascribed Austrian and Yugoslav uneasiness over Italian border preparations to Italy's declared policy of being strong on all northern frontiers.

It is common knowledge, also, that the government approves the massing of Italian workmen in such industrial centers as Bolzano, to Italianize the northern frontier.

Nevertheless, doubt was expressed concerning any special massing of troops at present in the North.

poles as the President drove through Charlottesville and Richmond.

Before attending church service, the President spent half an hour among the ruins of the original Jamestown.

From the starting point of British history in America, the President drove to Williamsburg and in the afternoon proceeded another 10 miles on the same narrow peninsula to Yorktown where 176 years after its founding the British reign here was concluded.

With Mrs. Roosevelt, Interior Secretary Harold L. Ickes, Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin McIntyre and Miss Marguerite Lehand, the President lunched at one of Virginia's mansion houses, Carter's Grove, now occupied by Archibald M. McCrae, a friend of Secretary Ickes.

At Yorktown, he went aboard the Presidential yacht Potomac for an overnight cruise back to the Capital, where tomorrow he will hold the second conference in recent days with Postmaster General Farley on the political campaign.

Son to Meet Roosevelt.

Portsmouth, N. H., July 5 (AP).—James Roosevelt, son of the President, said tonight he would leave here Wednesday on his yacht Sewanna to pick up his father "somewhere along the Maine coast," probably east of Portland.

Roosevelt declined to say where his father would join him, but said the President would come to Maine by train from his Hyde Park, N. Y., home probably the latter part of this week.

The President, he declared, probably would remain at his Campobello Island home about a week and then go to Ottawa to visit Lord Tweedmuir, Governor General of Canada.

Selassie Calls League Action Illegal; Leaves

Cites Lack of Unanimity in Resolutions; Denies Causing War.

By the United Press.

Geneva, July 5.—Emperor Haile Selassie, the "forgotten man" of Ethiopia, made his final blast at the League of Nations today as he prepared to leave Geneva—the graveyard of his ancient kingdom—for London.

The disillusioned Negus sent a letter to League Secretary General Josef Avenol vigorously protesting two resolutions adopted by the Assembly yesterday. The Assembly voted to end anti-Italian sanctions and refused to grant Ethiopia a $50,000,000 loan to resume hostilities against Italy.

It was understood that the fallen King of Kings described the resolutions as illegal and unbinding because of Ethiopia's negative vote.

Unanimity Lacking.

"Since unanimity was not obtained, the resolutions were killed and cannot be termed expressions of the Assembly's desire, as Premier Paul Van Zeeland, of Belgium, announced after Ethiopia's negative ballot," the Negus reportedly said.

A memorandum, accompanying the letter, detailedly rebutted the Italian memorandum alleging the the Emperor provoked the war and denied Italy's claim that the Roman legion brought civilization to Ethiopia.

The memorandum also produced evidence purporting to show that a provisional government still exists in the unoccupied sections of western Ethiopia. The Conquering Lion of Judah has indicated that he will return there to reorganize his forces and continue the war against Italy. If he does return, he probably will go by way of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

Delegation Silent.

The Ethiopian delegation, shocked and disappointed by the League's complete surrender to Premier Benito Mussolini, maintained utmost silence because of fear of causing incidents.

Members refused to comment on reports that Swiss authorities intimated to the Negus that he could not remain in Switzerland after adjournment of the Assembly.

The Negus entrained for Paris at 10:50 p. m., en route to London.

The last chapter of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute, so far as the League is concerned, will be written tomorrow when the co-ordination committee meets at 10 a. m. to recommend that League states lift anti-Italian sanctions. The recommendation is expected to become effective on July 10.

50 Italian Workers Die.

Rome, July 5 (AP).—An official statement today said 50 workmen died in East Africa during June, bringing to 505 the total of such deaths since January, 1935.

Hitler Addresses Rally.

Weimar, Germany, July 5 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, propaganda minister, Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, and other Nazi leaders addressed a party convention here today, but none of them made any reference to the Danzig situation.

Press Enthusiastic.

Berlin, July 5 (AP).—Germany's controlled press today received enthusiastically the Geneva speech of Dr. Arthur Karl Greiser, urging revision in the relationship between the League of Nations and the free territory of Danzig.

Official sources, however, said they were not prepared to comment authoritatively.

Sunday papers reported the speech of the Danzig senate president extensively under such captions as "Hands off German Danzig" and "Plain Words by Greiser."

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung said editorially: "The only logical deduction is: away with the League of Nations commissioner in Danzig."

Poland Is Silent.

Warsaw, July 5 (AP).—Poland learned of the new turn in Danzig affairs today from banner-line captions such as: "Greiser Shows His Tongue;" "Sensational Behavior of Herr Greiser."

Editorial comment was lacking, due to the late hour at which reports of the Geneva speech of Dr. Arthur Karl Greiser, president of the Nazi-controlled senate in the free territory, reached Warsaw.

Political circles wondered how much farther Col. Joseph Beck, Polish foreign minister, would go in his conciliatory attitude toward Germany.

They contrasted his pronounced policy favoring an understanding with Germany to the recent utterance by Gen. Edward Rydz-Smigly, the army inspector general, who said, "Poland won't permit anybody to snatch away any part of her garment, not even the button."

His reference to "the button" was taken to mean Danzig, which is Poland's chief commercial outlet.

Danzig Is Tense.

Free City of Danzig, July 5 (AP).—Danzig's citizenry displayed high tension and uncertainity tonight over the future of the free territory.

There were wild rumors of imminent Nazi action, but party officials denied them flatly.

Nazi newspapers issued three special editions with comment from Paris, Berlin, Geneva and Warsaw of the League of Nations speech of Dr. Arthur Karl Greiser, in which the Nazi senate president urged revision of the relations between Danzig and the League.

The papers were torn out of the hands of news sellers as soon as they appeared on the streets.

Any question of a plebiscite to decide Danzig's future was left open until Dr. Greiser returns from Geneva via Berlin, where it was believed he would consult with Albert Forster, the Danzig Nazi leader, and others.

Sean Lester, League high commissioner, was due back in Danzig tonight.

Manager, Wife Appear Today In Girl Slaying

Police Hold to Revenge Theory, but Suggest Blackmail Link.

By the United Press.

Chicago, July 5.—The fevered search for Mrs. Carmelia Freed, sought in the murder of the blonde playgirl, Audrey Vallette, became perfunctory tonight as police heard she and her husband would present themselves for questioning tomorrow.

The embarrassed investigators, unable to find a trace of Mrs. Freed or her night club operator husband, Eddie, while newspaper reporters located both for interviews, turned their attention to a study of the erotic career of the victim, convent-bred daughter of a prominent family.

Some search was still being made of the Dunes section of Indiana, where the Capone gang once held sway, chiefly because Freed had been an intimate of gang leaders in prohibition days.

Revenge Held Motive.

Police held to their original theory that a vengeful wife shot the Vallette woman to death in her La Salle Towers apartment, the manager of which identified Mrs. Freed as the woman who fled the building soon after the shooting.

But the names of prominent men found in three diaries kept by Miss Vallette, who had recently changed her name to Annabelle Blake, suggested to detectives that blackmail may have been involved.

This possibility was heightened by a report that two nights before her death Miss Vallette made a vague threat to expose someone.

"If people don't take care," she was reported to have said, "I may put on my red dress."

Reference to Gang Girl.

This was an obvious reference to the shooting of John Dillinger, betrayed to Federal agents by Anna Sage, "the woman in red." It was uttered in the Nut House Cafe, of which Eddie Freed was part owner, and where his wife acted as hostess.

It indicated, when coupled with Miss Vallette's revealing diary, that while the immediate motive for the crime may have been revenge, it may have been instigated by some person who feared disclosure of his relations with the victim, police said.

The blonde playgirl's acquaintances extended over the country and included several nationally known figures of the sports world. She became acquainted with men from out of town, her correspondence revealed, through party girls in other cities, who would give her telephone number to traveling men coming to Chicago.

Abe Morovitz, counsel for Freed, described his client as suffering from a nervous breakdown. He professed ignorance of Mrs. Freed's whereabouts.

90 Are Stricken At Sect's Dinner

Manchester, N. H., July 5 (AP).—At least 90 persons were stricken with what doctors said was ptomaine poisoning after attending a dinner meeting of a religious sect tonight.

Doctors said no one was seriously ill.

First reports at the hospital here were that 40 persons from all sections of New England were being treated here.

From places along the route between here and Nashua came reports that 40 persons had been treated along the way. In Nashua Sergt. Benjamin B. Murray, of the Nashua police, said ten were in hospitals there.

The meeting was a regular New England gathering of the sect.

Police and health authorities seized samples of food served at the dinner.

Holy Land Food Poison Fatal to 1, Sickens 100

Jerusalem, July 5 (Palcor Agency)—One Jew died today, and more than 100 others were treated at Jerusalem hospitals and clinics for food and fish poisoning.

Police were seeking the cause.

An Arab was killed, and three others reported wounded last night by British troops, repulsing an attack on the military camp at Hebron.

One Jewish employe of the public works department was injured seriously, and two others were hurt slightly by a bomb thrown at them as they were walking near the Damascus Gate in Jerusalem.

A government communique said a number of other bombs was thrown in various towns and villages. An Arab was injured seriously in one explosion at Latrun.

altogether. Night found the Hoffmans still some distance from Washington.

After stopping in a tourist camp Saturday night the Hoffmans finally arrived here yesterday morning. With them they had their baby's formula—but no baby.

Hoffman decided the smart thing would be to go to the spots most usually visited by tourists in the hope of finding his mislaid child. He went to Mount Vernon, Arlington, the Capitol and the Washington Monument—but no Krafciks.

Meanwhile, the Krafciks, as anxious to give the child back as the Hoffmans were to get her, went to the police, who sent out a radio lookout call for the Hoffmans.

Then Krafcik told police he would be at Thirty-fourth street and Massachusetts avenue at 6 p. m. and that, if the Hoffmans were found meantime, he would meet them there.

At the appointed intersection at 6 p. m. a Post reporter saw an Ohio car drive by. A Post photographer followed, and after a mile and a half chase overtook the car.

In it were the Hoffmans, who, unaware of the rendezvous, had started back for Cleveland.

Informed of the situation, the Hoffmans went back to the appointed corner, only to learn that a car answering the description of the Krafcik machine had just wheezed past, its driver oblivious to shouted requests to stop.

The Hoffmans waited around for a while and willingly sat on the runningboard of their car to pose for pictures. They weren't worried, really, but they wanted their child. Andrew, although a nice enough boy, wouldn't do for a permanent swap, they felt.

After a wait of an hour they decided the Krafciks already were bound for Cleveland. So they departed, hoping to overtake their relatives' car at a tourist camp.

Newspapermen followed them beyond Rockville. At that time the Hoffmans had about given up hope of a reunion before they reached Cleveland tomorrow.

Captain C. H. Younkins Dies After Long Illness

Stroudsburg, Pa., July 5 (U.P.).—Capt. Chester H. Younkins, 47, Pennsylvania National Guard officer, died at his home here following an illness of several months.

Younkins, a member of Company G, 109th Regiment of the National Guard, had a meritorious service record in the United States Army. He served on the Mexican border and later was a member of the American Expeditionary Force in the World War.

He is survived by his wife.

Slain Youth Is Found Bound Nude to Tree

Madrid, July 5 (AP).—Naked and tied to a tree, Jose Maria Sanchez, Fascist youth, was found dead today, his head riddled with bullets.

The youth, son of Mariano Sanchez Rexach, impresario, had been missing from his home for three days. His body was found near the town of Pozuelos, not far from Madrid. The killing was believed by some persons to have been in reprisal for the slaying of two Socialist dairy workers and the wounding of four others as they left a meeting Friday night.

Edward Orders Secret Sinking Of King George's Racing Yacht

Britannia to Be Scuttled Under Cover of Darkness; Craft, Which Was Built in 1893, Won 231 First Prizes.

By the Associated Press.

Cowes, England, July 5.—British navy officers awaited only favorable conditions tonight for the secret scuttling of the proud Britannia, King George's racing cutter.

Under cover of darkness, away from prying eyes, the craft—one of the best-known racing yachts in marine history—will be decently interred beneath the waters of the English channel.

Orders to this effect, it has been announced, have been given by King Edward and transmitted to officials here by Sir Philip Hunloke, King George's sailing master.

Ordered by Will.

By terms of King George's will, the gallant yacht, which has more than 200 victories to her credit, was left to King Edward with the proviso that if the new king did not want her she was to be offered to the other sons of the late monarch.

In the event no one wanted the yacht, the will expressly stipulated, she was to be broken up or otherwise destroyed, but not sold.

The fact that King Edward has no particular interest in yachting, coupled with the age of the Britannia—she was launched in 1893—means the end, therefore, of the yacht in which King George found pleasure and excitement.

Originally built for the present King's grandfather, King Edward VII, then Prince of Wales, the Britannia easily defeated all competitors during her first season's racing.

Met 17 Times.

The following year Britannia was challenged by the successful America's cup defender, Vigilant. The yachts met on no fewer than 17 occasions. Britannia won 11 first prizes and Vigilant only five.

Altogether during her first five years' racing, Britannia won 122 firsts and 25 other prizes in 289 starts. In her 43 years of racing she started in 625 races and won 231 firsts and 129 other prizes.

During his reign King George had the Britannia reconditioned six times. More than $25,000 was spent on her in one form or another. In many of the races King George himself was a member of the crew.

was modest. Their clothes were commonplace.

The "buried money" stories were put down as just rumor until John Iwers inheritance tax figures—John was second to die, in 1935—came out. When Henry passed out of the picture a few months later, the Voss couple was living with him.

"We don't know how much it is worth," Voss said at that time. "We think there is a lot of money there, but we haven't really looked yet."

District Court Judge A. C. Ring suggested a search. Interested relatives joined in.

Thirty-five thousand dollars in securities was found hidden in the house where the aged bachelor lived.

Then an iron box, containing $38,000 in securities, was unearthed. The money was taken to a Davenport bank, and the farm placed under guard to prevent it being overrun by unauthorized treasure seekers and curious.

Last week a second box was found. It was wrapped in a burlap sack, hidden under litter in the machine shed. In it were $7,800 in gold and silver certificates, $61,000 in Iowa municipal bonds, $5,000 in uncashed dividend checks, and $38,000 in certificates issued in the bank guaranty fund of South Dakota.

Society Woman Faces Charge of Kidnaping

Meridian, Miss., July 5 (AP).—Mrs. Nell McCarty, member of a prominent Philadelphia, Miss., family, was free today on bond of $1,500 on a charge of kidnaping Mrs. Bertha Bray, Meridian clubwoman.

County Attorney Russell Wright said Mrs. McCarty was arrested after Mrs. Bray complained that she was forced into an automobile the other woman was driving and beaten severely by four persons she said she did not know.

The county attorney quoted Mrs. Bray as saying the occupants of the car threatened to kill her. He declined to discuss a possible motive.

Hunger Protest at U. S. Ended by Puerto Rican

San Juan, Puerto Rico, July 5 (AP).—Prof. Clemente Pereda today ended his five-day squatting hunger strike against the island's celebration of United States Independence Day.

He had sat in the middle of San Juan's main square, La Plaza Principal, since July 1 without touching any food.

British Tune Up First Seaplane For U.S. Service

Atlantic Fleet Is Planned as Construction of Big Air Base Nears.

By the Associated Press.

Portsmouth, England, July 5.—A new British air hub was in the making tonight while mechanics tuned up the first flying boat of a promised Atlantic fleet.

The giant four-motored plane, prototype of the airliner with which Britain is to face the Atlantic voyage, made its first appearance on the slip-way at Rochester this week.

Others are nearing completion.

The actual work of making Langstone Harbor a combined land and marine base for empire and transatlantic routes is expected to begin in another month.

By this step, the United Kingdom expects to advance a program of civil aviation aimed at putting the empire on top of the flying world.

It is a step toward the day, not long distant, when, it is anticipated, a regular schedule of transatlantic plane transport will be an actuality.

Service Expected in 1937.

Early next year, it is being predicted here, a service to America will be under way, with two American and two British flying boats arriving and departing weekly.

The Portsmouth town council has already approved the project of the airport, to be the largest of its kind in the world and to cost close to $6,000,000.

Government financial assistance is virtually assured, some of it at least, from the proposed new air navigation bill with its provision for a 50 per cent increase in air subsidies to $7,500,000 yearly.

For Portsmouth the new airport would mean distinction as the air hub of the world. Langstone Harbor, which has Portsmouth Harbor to the West and Chichester Harbor to the East, would become a large inland lake. Several hundred acres of ground would be prepared for the handling of land planes.

Interest in Flying Boats.

As far as Britain's contribution to transatlantic air travel is concerned the chief interest now centers in the flying boats which, stripped to bare essentials are to make reconnoitering flights before long.

Orders to proceed with the flights are expected soon.

Progress on the pick-a-back airplane, a combination in which a "mother" plane will carry on its back a smaller long range seaplane for "launching" at high altitude, is more secret.

Britain's first efforts toward transatlantic service are expected to be directed at Bermuda via the Canary Islands, with the North Atlantic crossing to be attempted later.

Texas River Drops; Flood Leaves Ruin

Victoria, Tex., July 5 (AP).—Ravaging flood waters of the Guadalupe River rolled slowly gulfward today, taking a heavy toll of crops and livestock and inundating highways and railroads.

Residents of the low-lying areas toward San Antonio Bay apparently were spared serious threats against their safety through ample warnings. Information here was that those in the flooded areas had fled to safety.

Waters which flooded the Guadalupe and other south Texas rivers had taken a toll of 26 lives in the upper reaches, where sudden summer rains sent the streams bounding over their banks without warning.

Height of the river here in the main channel dropped about 15 inches during the past 48 hours from a peak of 31.3 feet, which spread the stream 4 to 6 miles wide over lowlands, causing an estimated $1,200,000 loss other than that to highways and railroads. Upstream it had dropped to 27.3 feet at Cuero from a record of 43.2 feet and at Gonzales to 20.1 feet from a peak of 38.2 feet.

Men, Cool Your Backs With Backless Shirts

West End, N. J., July 5 (AP).—Backless shirts for men had their first showing at a local hotel today.

Designed by a New Yorker, the new shirt may be worn, its manufacturers say, by policemen, clerks, laborers or bank executives. A thin band from the collar to the small of the back connects with a band around the waist. The traditional tail is absent.

Thompson First 'Spy' Found Guilty in Peace

Los Angeles, July 5 (AP).—Harry Thomas Thompson, 30-year-old former yeoman in the United States Navy, will become tomorrow the first man sentenced in a peace-time espionage case in this country.

Judge Leon Yankwich, in whose court a Federal jury Friday convicted Thompson of conspiring to sell his country's naval secrets to a Japanese naval officer, declared the case was unprecedented. Judge Yankwich is empowered to impose a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison.

The Government charged Thompson, disguised as a naval officer, boarded United States warships and obtained confidential information which he sold to Lieut. Comdr. Toshio Miyazaki in violation of the espionage act. Miyazaki, indicted with Thompson, is believed to be in Japan.

Public Affairs Institute Opens Session Today

Political Issues Are Missing as Discussion Topic at Virginia University.

By Felix Bruner.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charlottesville, Va., July 5.—Discussion of current problems of business and finance will feature the program of the Institute of Public Affairs opening at the University of Virginia here tomorrow.

Little of a directly political nature appears on this year's program, in contrast to that of last year when the American Liberty League took advantage of the occasion to attack the New Deal. The institute is open to discussion of a wide variety of problems.

This year each political party was invited to send a representative to debate the issues of the current campaign. The Republican representative will be former Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut, but thus far the Democrats have not indicated that they will be represented.

Democratic party leaders have expressed resentment over the turn taken by the discussion last year. Nevertheless, university officials explained they invited the New Deal to send speakers to answer the Liberty Leaguers then.

Farley Asked to Pick Man.

When James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, came here Friday with President Roosevelt, he was asked by Dean Charles C. Maphis, in charge of the institute to designate some one to appear. Farley took the matter under advisement.

There are indications, in view of the prominence of the program of representatives of business and finance, that the discussion again this year will take an anti-New Deal turn. The financial discussion will be opened tomorrow by Orrin G. Wood, president of the Investment Bankers Association, who will discuss "two major problems affecting the investor today." On the same program will be Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor.

Tuesday night, Charles R. Gay, president of the New York Stock Exchange, will be the speaker. Other speakers on financial subjects will include Colby M. Chester, chairman of the board of General Foods Corporation; Arthur A. Ballantine, New York lawyer; Dr. W. Randolph Burgess, vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York; Leland Rex Robinson, president of the International Securities Corporation of America, and many others.

Besides a discussion of business problems, the first week's program of the institute includes consideration of international problems, particularly Latin-American relations, problems of the church and democracy, and discussion of local government.

Missions Leader Speaks.

The Rev. John McDowell, secretary of the committee on social and industrial relations of the board of national missions of the Presbyterian Church, spoke at vesper services tonight as a prelude to the opening of the institute.

Dr. McDowell made a plea for leadership of vision, knowledge, conviction, faith, character and religion.

Hoey Nominated By N. C. Primary

Raleigh, N. C., July 5 (U.P.).—Clyde R. Hoey, who took the responsibility of caring for a family at the age of 12 upon the death of his father, has won the Democratic nomination for Governor by a majority upward of 50,000 vote over Dr. Ralph W. McDonald, of Winston-Salem.

The nomination is tantamount to election in North Carolina because a majority of registered voters are Democrats.

With 139 precincts out of 1,851 in the State to be reported, the voting was Hoey, 261,190; McDonald, 205,572.

U. S. Agents' Captives in $1,456,000 Bond Theft

Four of five underworld characters to be arraigned today for handling stolen U. S. Treasury certificates. Left to right, Ben Espy, Moe Sedway, Morris Reisner and Dave Berman.

are known to be associated with previous members of the stolen bond syndicate already in custody."

The syndicate also is charged with handling securities stolen in the $590,000 bond theft from the United States Trust Co. in New York on December 13, 1934.

The New York bureau office said two Treasury notes of $100,000 each were found in a traveling bag checked in Grand Central Station, according to the Associated Press. In the roundup that followed, Reisner was seized and the check found in his possession. Neither he nor any of the other prisoners was armed when taken.

In each of the two thefts, the bonds were removed from tellers' cages with such delicate skill that no witnesses were ever located. About $440,000 of the loot was recovered in Europe several months ago.

Two Plead Guilty.

Members of the syndicate previously taken into custody by the bureau's agents and now awaiting trial are Meyer Frankenberg, Rocco DeGrassi, George DeGrassi, William Evans, Gabriel Marosi, Earl F. Palmer, Charles Hartman, Theodore D. Crowley and Amelia Linkovitch.

Two others, Paul Alexander and Melvin B. Smith, already have plead guilty. The latter was sentenced to two years in a United States penitentiary. Sentence has not yet been pronounced on Alexander, Hoover said.

Some of the stolen securities found their way to Washington, according to the chief of the bureau.

"The investigation," he said, "has developed information indicating interstate and foreign transportation of various of the securities to Paris, France; Nassau, Bahama Islands; Florida, Kansas City and Washington, D. C."

Morris Reisner, one of the five to be arraigned this morning, is a native of St. Paul, Minn., and has been a recognized underworld leader in that city for a number of years, Hoover explained.

In Hamm Case.

At the present time he is under $1,000 bond as a material witness in the William A. Hamm, jr., kidnaping.

Moe Sedway was described by Hoover as "a New York police character who has been arrested on various occasions since 1917 under charges ranging from grand larceny to burglary, assault and robbery and vagrancy."

"Dave Berman," he continued, "is likewise a hoodlum who has been arrested on various occasions and served a term in Sing Sing Penitentiary on charges of armed assault."

Jack Green and Ben Espy are minor figures in the stolen bond racket in New York City, according to the chief of the Bureau of Investigation.

Zep Completes Trip.

Otto Meets Chiefs In Switzerland City

Bregenz, Austria, July 5 (AP).—Reports reaching here today said the Archduke Otto, heir presumptive to the Hapsburg throne of Austria, had reached Basel, Switzerland, for conferences with Austrian legitimists.

The advices said Otto first made his headquarters at the Three Kings Hotel, but withdrew to a more secluded spot later in the day.

Several legitimist leaders were observed crossing the border into Switzerland, including the Archduke Eugene, who went via Zurich.

Basel, Switzerland, July 5 (AP).—Austrian circles said today the Archduke Otto, Hapsburg heir-presumptive, had been "in and out of Switzerland" several times in the last few weeks.

He probably will return for further conferences with legitimist leaders in the near future, they stated. He left July 1 to return to his Belgian home, they added.

Re-election Is Spurned By Pittsburgh Mayor

Pittsburgh, July 5 (AP).—Mayor William N. McNair tonight said he "absolutely will not be a candidate for re-election next year." The executive's statement was prompted by decision of Allegheny County candidates for the General Assembly that they would support a city manager plan for Pittsburgh in the 1937 Legislature.

McNair commented:

"They don't need to bother. They don't need to change the form of the city government to get me out."

Bull Run Battle To Be Restaged At Dedication

2,000 Soldiers Will Enact Famous Fight; Field to Be Dedicated.

The Battle of Bull Run, called Manassas by those from the South, will be re-enacted this month—in sham.

On the same battlefield of the Civil War, 2,000 men—representing the North and the South—will refight that famous battle.

From the U. S. Marine Corps a thousand blue-clad soldiers, dressed like the men who fought for the Union, will exchange sham volleys with a thousand men from Fort Washington, representing the Southern gray.

The sham battle will take place on July 21—the seventy-fifth anniversary of the battle.

Will Dedicate Field.

A restored battlefield will be dedicated before the battle is refought. It will be dedicated to the memory of those who lost their lives in the Civil War, to a memory of an internal strife, to a new spirit of unionism which was gained thereby.

Men and women whose ancestors fought under the Union flag, hundreds whose grandparents fought for Gen. Robert E. Lee, will watch the battle.

Officials in charge of the celebration have estimated that more than 60,000 persons will attend the ceremonies. This figure is based on attendance at the dedication of the Chancellorsville battlefield, which drew approximately 30,000 people.

And because Manassas is much nearer the metropolitan cities of the North than Chancellorsville, officials are expecting an even greater crowd.

Freeman to Speak.

Before the first shot rings out to echo across the stream Bull Run, from which the battle takes its name, Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman, of Richmond, biographer of Gen. Robert E. Lee, will speak.

Following re-enactment of the battle, a troop of cavalry from Fort Myer will give a musical ride.

And before the smoke from the last volley of battle has drifted away from the field, 55 airplanes of the Fleet Marine Corps at Quantico, will engage in aerial combat over the field.

It will be a strange sight—droning airplanes cutting through the sky like swallows above the field where thousands of men in blue and gray fought another kind of war—entirely different. Theirs was an ancient war, a war of military tactics that now are somewhat antiquated, a war of poor equipment, a struggle without modern military devices.

Will Reproduce Battle.

The battle will be a small scale reproduction of the real encounter. It will last but an hour and a half. The North and the South fought all that hot July day in the 1860's. But to repeat that would tire the crowd, and the soldiers.

These marine officers will lead the forces of the Union: Col. C. D. Miller and Lieut. Col. G. D. Jackson, jr. And these officers will lead the gray-clad forces that will be the South. Maj. "Stonewall" Jackson and Lieut. Col. G. D. Ord, both of Fort Washington.

Same Flags to Wave.

Flags that flapped on the battlefield during the Civil War will be used again. They have been loaned the soldiers by various historical organizations. All the men who will fight will be dressed in blue and gray, it is understood. They will go through exactly the same movements made by the armies of the North and the South when the Battle of Manassas raged for a day on the summer-hot plains of Virginia. They will repeat the actions of the troops of Stonewall Jackson and Gen. Beauregard.

Not a word has been forgotten.

Through a loudspeaker that will echo through the vast audience (a man who will represent Gen. Stonewall Jackson and a man who will pose as Gen. Bee, of South Carolina, those present will hear again those famous words:

"Look at Jackson's men. They stand there like a stone wall."

That is how "Stonewall" Jackson got his nickname.

Spain Strike Bid Fails.

Madrid, July 5 (AP).—A government formula for solution of the strike of 100,000 construction workers was reported rejected today by employers as "unfair."

16 Spectators Hurt As Bomb Explodes

Findlay, Ohio, July 5 (AP).—Sixteen persons were injured, six seriously, last midnight when a bomb flew across a river and exploded in a group of spectators at the annual community fireworks display here.

Six persons remained in a hospital today. Ten others were treated for burns and sent to their homes.

The noise bomb was supposed to explode at a height of 75 feet and again at 150 feet. Instead, it veered across the Blanchard River after the first blast and exploded the second time in the group of watchers.

Witnesses said those in the compact group had no opportunity to escape the explosion as the flaming bomb ricocheted toward them.

19 Imprisoned as Reds.

Dresden, Germany, July 5 (AP).—Nineteen persons whom authorities described as Communists were sentenced today to prison terms ranging from two to five years and two months for "preparing acts of high treason." These were stated to consist of surreptitious communistic agitation and distribution of communistic literature.

U. S. Seeking To Aid Victims Of Hay Fever

Agriculture Department to Begin Study, Hoping to Help Find Cure.

If you are one who anticipates the hay fever season with two or three extra handkerchiefs in spare pockets, here's a word of comfort.

The United States Department of Agriculture is concerned over your pathetic prospects for a happy summer. In fact, it is on a hunt for the bogey man who threatens about this time every year to send you to the North woods.

The bogey is an elusive fellow—and he may not be found. Then again, he may be cornered by the scientists, just as was, a few years years ago, the mysterious Vitamin D that answered so many of the nutrition experts' problems.

Takes Up New Search.

The department's Bureau of Chemistry and Soils is taking up this new search, Dr. W. W. Skinner, assistant chief, announced yesterday. And Dr. Henry Stevens, biochemist of the protein and nutrition division, has been assigned the job of organizing the searching party. Already, it was announced, Dr. Harry S. Bernton, noted allergist and professor of hygiene at the Georgetown University Medical School, has joined the group. He will act as consulting specialist in the department's studies.

"Now, we're on a search," Dr. Stevens explained yesterday. "We hope to find something—but that remains to be seen. I'd hate to raise people's hopes for a cure-all, until we have something concrete."

Actually, the department won't point out any remedies.

"We're not doctors—we're just chemists," Dr. Stevens said. "We hope to gather some data that may give the medical men something more to work on."

Allergic Disturbances.

The basis of the department's study is the theory that certain substances in agricultural products and by-products contribute to afflictions, known among the doctors and other scientists as "allergic disturbances."

Hay fever is one of these ailments. The disorder that causes some people to break into a rash when they eat strawberries is another. If you sneeze when you smell a rose, or have a fit of coughing when you get a whiff of certain other flowers, you have an "allergic disturbance."

"Similar substances present in common foods, textile fibers, furs and other farm products are also capable of causing distressing disturbances when absorbed through the skin or the membranes of the respiratory or digestive systems of supersensitive persons," Dr. Stevens pointed out.

One person, he may be young or old, in every ten suffers from one or more of these afflictions, the department says.

The specialists in their investigation will try to find what it is all about—or, as the department puts it, "will attempt to isolate these offending components and to determine their composition."

The investigation is undertaken by authority of the Bankhead-Jones act, which President Roosevelt signed a year ago. The chemical study of the allergens is one of the several studies made possible under the act's provisions.

Newspaper Guild Certified by NLRB

By the Associated Press.

The National Labor Relations Board announced yesterday it had certified the American Newspaper Guild as the "exclusive representative" of editorial employes of the Associated Press in New York City for collective bargaining with the management.

By order of the board's regional director, that body said, an election was conducted among the employes by secret ballot between May 25 and May 29.

"A majority of those eligible voted; a majority of those voting, though less than a majority of those eligible, voted for the American Newspaper Guild," the board added.

"In certifying the guild, we are following the rule established by the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit in Virginian Railway Co. vs. System Federation No. 40 * * *."

Foe of Huey Long Dies in Louisiana

New Orleans, July 5 (U.P.).—Col. John P. Sullivan, leonine veteran of Louisiana politics, whose power the late Huey P. Long sought in vain to crush, died shortly before 11 o'clock tonight of heart disease.

Sullivan, 59, was National Exalted Ruler of the Elks 15 years ago. For years a colorful power behind political scenes in Louisiana and later a patronage distributor for the National Administration, Sullivan died after a relapse shortly before midnight.

Silver Purchase By U. S. Failure, Expert Asserts

Foreign Policy Association Report Declares Major Aims Are Unattained.

The Administration's silver buying policy, on which the Treasury must have spent by June, 1936, close to $575,000,000" has been economically injurious to the United States and the world, it was charged last night in a report by the Foreign Policy Association. The additional charge was made that issuance of new silver certificates against the metal is a direct inflationary procedure.

The report, titled "The United States Silver Policy," was written by John Parke Young, of Occidental College. He asserted the $575,000,000 had been expended by the Government "in acquiring a metal for which it has no need and which no one wants," and said the cost was greater than that of building and maintaining the Panama Canal.

Pointing out that for many years the Treasury has possessed excessive amounts of silver, Dr. Young writes:

"Since this country is not on the silver standard, a silver reserve is of no more use than would be a hoard of any other commodity, such as copper or wheat."

Says Major Aims Unattained.

The silver policy also has failed in two of its principal aims, Dr. Young concludes, the aims (1) to stabilize the price of silver in world markets, and (2) to increase the purchasing power of the silver standard countries, including China.

Of the asserted aim to increase the purchasing power of silver standard countries, Dr. Young wrote that "this proposition involved a well recognized economic fallacy * * *. Raising the price of silver does not increase the purchasing power of silver standard countries, but on the contrary interferes with trade and economic conditions."

Cites Chinese Collapse.

Still another aim, he asserted, was to encourage foreign nations to utilize more silver in their monetary systems, but "the various nations have shown no inclination to employ silver more extensively; on the contrary, China, the great silver using country, was compelled to abandon the silver standard and dispose of large quantities of the metal from monetary and banking channels."

Mexico was forced to call in its silver pesos and substitute paper. "Thus," he continued, "instead of bringing monetization, the program has brought demonetization of silver."

The large expenditures for silver, the report said, have been coming at a time when the budget is "badly out of balance and when deficit financing out of bank credit is having inflationary effect.

"The fact that new silver certificates are issued against the metal does not relieve the financial burden, for if the country is to have this amount of paper money inflation, the paper could as well have been spent for something useful, such as retiring the Government debt."

Summary of No Trump Rebids.

You have bid one no trump, holding:

Spades, A Q 2; Hearts, 9 7 4; Diamonds, A Q 6; Clubs, A 6 5 3.

If partner bids two no trump, three no trump, or two of any suit, pass. If partner bids three of any suit, bid three no trump. You have a minimum no trump, and cannot bid again unless forced.

Holding:

Spades, Q 9 4 2; Hearts, K 8 6; Diamonds, A K 5; Clubs, A J 7.

If partner bids two no trump, proceed to three no trump. You have four plus honor tricks. But pass a raise to three no trump.

If partner bids two diamonds, bid three diamonds. If partner bids two clubs, bid two no trump. If partner bids two spades, raise to three spades. If partner bids two hearts, pass.

Holding:

Spades, A J 8 4; Hearts, A K 6; Diamonds, A J 7; Clubs, K 9 2.

Bid three spades over partner's single raise. If partner raises to three no trump, pass. If partner bids two hearts, raise to three hearts. If partner bids two diamonds, bid two no trump. If partner bids two spades, raise to three spades. If partner bids two clubs, bid two spades. If partner bids three of any suit, bid three spades and, on a subsequent round of bidding, four no trump. If partner bids four hearts or four spades, pass.

Capitalizing Opponents' Errors.

It is a grave question as to which is worse, making a bad mistake yourself, or failing to take advantage of the fact than an opponent has made one. North and East shared the doubtful honors in today's hand. West, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.

	NORTH ♠ A Q 8 7 ♥ J 6 5 ♦ A K J 10 6 ♣ 10
WEST ♠ K 10 9 4 3 ♥ A K 10 7 4 ♦ Q 3 ♣ 9		EAST ♠ 6 5 2 ♥ 8 ♦ 5 4 ♣ A Q 8 6 5 4 3
	SOUTH ♠ J ♥ Q 9 3 2 ♦ 9 8 7 3 ♣ K J 7 3

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 spade	Pass	2 spades	Pass
3 hearts	Pass	4 spades	Pass
Pass	Pass

As may be seen, East's bidding was fantastic throughout. In the first place, he chose to raise the spade bid on what might charitably be called indifferent support, rather than to bid a perfectly good seven card suit of his own. Then, after his partner had shown a major two-suiter, he jumped, with total disregard of soundness, from three hearts to four spades, reasoning, I suppose, that he ought to show "better than a preference."

North started out to trap the spades, which was a shrewd idea, but nullified completely by his amazing failure to double the final contract. Apparently, East's ambitious bidding frightened him into silence. As I said before, I don't know which was worse, East's wildness or North's cowardice.

There was little to the play, declarer being quite helpless to avoid the loss of two diamond and four trump tricks. The 300 point penalty really was a black mark on both teams.

Proper bidding would have been:

West	North	East	South
1 spade	Pass	2 clubs	Pass
2 hearts	Pass	2 spades	Pass
Pass	Pass

This would have saved 200 points for the declarer, while the obviously correct double of the contract actually reached would have increased the defenders' profit 500 points.

The CCC Camps.

The complete mistake of Senator Steiwer's scorn for the CCC in his keynote address is indicated by the latest poll conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion, results of which were published in this paper yesterday. Eighty-two per cent of the Nation was shown to be in favor of continuing the camps. Of the Republicans approached by the canvassers, 67 per cent expressed approval of the camps. In the light of the proven accuracy of the poll, it seems now beyond question that the Civilian Conservation Corps represents one of the most unqualified successes of the New Deal.

A second question asked by the institute, as to whether military training should be a part of the CCC regimen, yielded a surprising answer. Seventy-seven per cent of the Nation answered "yes" with the Socialists showing the least enthusiasm: 57 per cent of their vote was "no." The Socialists have an almost congenital phobia for fascism and their opposition to anything remotely suggesting the iron fist is taken for granted. But perhaps this time they have a case. Is it possible that more than three-quarters of the country would have no objection if the CCC camps were converted into institutions not far different from Hitler's steel-bound labor camps?

It cannot be so. It must be that the question was misconstrued. "Should military training be part of the duties of those who attend (CCC camps)?" read the question. Every one knows that large groups can be thrown together in close quarters and expected to live harmoniously only if a rigid and regular order is maintained. Even children's summer camps are operated on rigid schedules. It is fair to assume that a good proportion at least of the 77 per cent answering "yes" to the second question understood "military training" to mean "military discipline."

Politics In The Air Service.

Among the recommendations made by the Senate sub-committee which has been investigating the Bureau of Air Commerce is a proposal that all employes except division heads be brought under civil service rules and regulations and that promotion be based solely upon merit. This stress upon the importance of the merit system is strong indirect proof that the committee considers politics and the spoils system to be largely to blame for the disrepute into which the air service has fallen. Indeed, the report itself leaves no doubt on that point.

The spoils system is destructive of morale and inimical to efficiency under all conditions. Its devastating effects, however, are especially appalling when it invades a service in which inefficiency may spell loss of life. A majority of the members of the Senate committee have already agreed that the Bureau of Air Commerce was responsible for the crash which resulted in the death of Senator Bronson Cutting. In the light of the testimony presented, a thorough-going overhauling seems essential to eliminate the successful job-seekers who have displaced trained men whose very competence based on length of service disqualified them in the eyes of certain New Deal spoilsmen.

Mr. Phillips Goes To Rome.

The appointment of William Phillips, Undersecretary of State, as Ambassador to Italy to succeed Mr. Breckenridge Long, who has resigned for reasons of ill-health, is a wholly admirable one.

With the European situation as chaotic and dangerous as it is at the present time it is extremely important for this Nation to be represented in the leading capitals of that continent by men of the unusual competence of Mr. Phillips. As Ambassador to Belgium, Minister to Holland and to Canada, Assistant Secretary of State and, since March, 1933, Undersecretary, he has revealed diplomatic abilities of a high order.

By experience and training, therefore, he is just the man for the Rome post. Italy today undoubtedly occupies a crucial position in Europe. This can be seen in the eagerness with which the great powers that are members of the League of Nations are prepared to forgive and forget the conquest of Ethiopia in order to bring Italy back into the European peace system. From his new vantage point Mr. Phillips will have an unusual opportunity to keep in close touch with the changing diplomatic picture.

It is not yet entirely clear whether this term of foreign service is temporary or not; that is whether his post as Undersecretary will or will not be filled. If it proves to be permanent it is to be hoped that his place will be taken by a career man possessing similar qualifications and with at least comparatively broad experience.

There is no reason why the Undersecretaryship should be regarded as a plum to be given to someone whose training has been more political than diplomatic. The experience of Great Britain, France and other countries has shown how important it is to have not only a trained personnel in the subordinate posts of a foreign office but also a permanent head of the service. Foreign ministers, like Secretaries of State, come and go. There is every reason why Undersecretaries should stay on.

District Fiscal Problems.

Maj. Donovan, the District Auditor, estimates that the deficit for the current fiscal year, 1936-37, will amount to $960,000. The actual deficiency in the general fund receipts for the period, however, will be close to $4,000,000, since current revenues will be supplemented by a surplus of over $2,700,000 left from the last fiscal year.

"The conclusion is inescapable," as the auditor says, "that the District of Columbia now needs more money than it is able to raise under existing provisions of law and the amount of the present Federal payment, if reasonably adequate provision is to be made for operating and maintenance costs and for capital improvements." Nevertheless, he is right in recommending that changes in existing tax rates be deferred until completion of the study into the fiscal relations between the Federal Government and the District recently authorized by Congress.

Some method of determining the amount of the Federal contribution to the District's upkeep will have to be worked out before it will be feasible to estimate the magnitude of the local tax burden required to balance the budget next year. Moreover, until the amount of the Federal contribution has been fixed at least tentatively, the committee which is now considering new tax plans for the District will not be in a position to make specific recommendations.

The only question at issue in the case of Washington is how to provide much needed funds to increase inadequate allowances for the local health service, for schools, police and other public activities. Washington's financial embarrassment is not the result of extravagant spending calling for retrenchment in outlays. The deficit is due to niggardly provision of funds to cover necessary governmental costs. Despite the rapid growth of the community and the increasing demands upon the District made by the growth of the Federal establishments, Federal contributions to the District have been drastically cut. In 1927 when total expenditures were less than $34,000,000, the Federal appropriation amounted to $9,000,000. During the last fiscal year it was only $5,700,000 and during the current year it has been further reduced to $5,000,000, minus $50,000 appropriated for the cost of the special study of fiscal relations. And even that sum was only secured after a bitter struggle with Representative Blanton and his supporters in the House.

As a result of this drastic paring of the Federal contribution, coincident with a rise in expenditures to the $40,000,000 level, the residents of Washington are today more heavily taxed than those of any other city of comparable character, according to L. H. Parker, Congressional tax expert. In a report to the Washington Board of Trade, Mr. Parker stated that the per capita tax of local residents was 65 per cent above the average of other Southern cities and 40 per cent above the Baltimore figure. Furthermore, during the eleven years prior to 1933 the local tax burden increased 98 per cent.

If the amount of the Federal contribution, based upon some accepted scientific formula, should prove inadequate to cover the present deficit and meet other unsatisfied needs, additional local taxes will, of course, be unavoidable. Fiscal balance not only has to be assured, but the District residents must not be deprived of any of those essential services that the community is obligated to provide.

Even when these pressing issues have been settled, the District will still be in a precarious financial position unless steps are taken to centralize responsibility for budget planning in the hands of the local authorities. The present system of divided responsibility, which permits the Federal Budget Bureau arbitrarily to cut and revise estimates before they are presented to Congress is thoroughly unsound. The District should be treated as an important unit of local government instead of being handled as if it were a Federal bureau. In that case, there would be much greater protection against ignorant and mischievous Congressional interference in local fiscal affairs by men like Representative Blanton whose chief service to the District lies in the impetus they give to radical reforms.

Blondes, Ltd.

In 1924, it was almost impossible to tell one girl from another. All of them were pineapple - bobbed, choker - pearled, and tightly cloched. But in 1925, Anita Loos came out with a startling generalization which left no doubt as to which was which. She divided all females into two distinct groups—brunettes and those whom gentlemen preferred. The fact that she also imbued the latter with tiara-taking ways did nothing to raise the deflated stock of the former.

For the past several years, Anita Loos has been in Hollywood where she has had ample opportunity to observe the results of her ultimatum. Until Jean Harlow went off the gold standard onto the platinum, it was generally conceded that the film metropolis contained more blondes than Sweden. Now, however, the author who made brunettes a drug on the market again has something to say on the subject. After a visit to New York, she reports that: "The country's facing a famine in blondes—they've all become redheads or gone brownette."

Instead of easing up the situation by her latest statement, Miss Loos only makes it worse. For this time she not only leaves brunettes out on a limb, but blondes and gentlemen also. How can gentlemen tell now which stock is preferred and which is common? How, indeed, can one tell now who are gentlemen?

Bullying The League.

Before adjourning, the Assembly of the League of Nations finally washed its hands of the Italo-Ethiopian affair.

Many believe that in doing as it has the League was simply facing facts, however disagreeable, that could not safely be glossed over or evaded. In an interview published elsewhere in this newspaper, Mr. Arthur Sweetser, a director of the League Secretariat, convincingly argues that the crisis in which the League now finds itself does not in the least portend the demise of the Geneva organization. In his belief the League has become so indispensable a factor in international relations that nothing could destroy it, not even another world war. This may be so. But there is no denying that the League today finds itself with its prestige at a rather low ebb; that its confession of failure in the Italo-Ethiopian affair has weakened the fabric of world peace.

Certainly there is no disguising the gloom, amounting in some cases to despair, with which those who have pinned their hopes for a better world order on the League, now view the situation. There was something symbolic in the suicide in the hall of the League Assembly of a Czech journalist at the moment when Haile Selassie's plea was being turned down. There are many others who now fear that the labors of 17 years on behalf of peace were all in vain.

On the other hand, the disciples of force have begun to regard the League as so weak and futile and toothless an institution that it can be browbeaten and humiliated without fear of reprisals. This was twice brought out during the recent League meeting.

There was first the egregious display of bad manners by Italian editors and correspondents who abused the hospitality of the League by starting a hostile demonstration against Haile Selassie when that exiled monarch was pleading his conquered nation's cause. And, later, a similar spirit was manifested by Arthur Greiser, President of the Danzig Senate, in the speeches he made before the Assembly and the Council.

Insisting that he spoke "in the name of the German people," he demanded that the League repudiate its high commissioner at Danzig and abandon all interference in the affairs of the Free City. For some time Herr Greiser has been the head of a government which has set at naught the provisions of the Danzig constitution guaranteeing civil liberties to all minorities, political, religious and racial, and which has carried out a reign of terror against all those who have fought the Nazification of Danzig. Yet he had the effrontery to declare that if the execution of the constitution became "the personal responsibility of the President of the Senate," "all rights of minorities under the constitution and treaties would remain untouched." And in leaving the rostrum of the Council he thumbed his nose at the international press reporting the proceedings.

This gesture, too, was symbolic. World public opinion as represented by the correspondents at Geneva, the League Covenant, solemn treaty pledges, the rights of minorities, even the laws of hospitality—the disciples of force feel that today they can thumb their noses at all of these things. They are encouraged by the League's manifestation of weakness. But their triumph may not be prolonged. The League and the forces of peace and of decent relations between nations may have lost a battle, but they have not yet lost the war.

The law presumes a man innocent until he is proved guilty, and the public assumes he is guilty as soon as a charge is entered against him.

The British Crown.

The Marquis of Londonderry in the Hungarian Quarterly.

The development of (the British) monarchy has followed a process of evolution which is consistent with other forms of Anglo-Saxon development . . . It may truly be said that the old idea of leadership, which was the original reason why a King became a King, has resolved itself now into the King still maintaining that position of leader, but by reason of the fact that in his presence and in his ideals he represents the wishes of the great mass of the people over whom he rules.

It may perhaps be said with justice that other Kings and Emperors in the recent past have not been able, by reason of circumstances, to maintain this, perhaps, platonic and dispassionate position, and that is the reason why thrones have toppled and fallen and dynasties have vanished, while the monarchy of Great Britain maintains its dignified progress through the pages of history . . . I believe that the institution of monarchy will continue to flourish . . . in England, where it will adapt itself in some form or other to the needs of the times, as it has done in the past.

Citizens' Applause.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Columbia Heights Citizens Association is certainly to be commended for sending a representative to the Democratic Convention in Philadelphia in an endeavor to get a plank in the platform granting to the citizens of the District of Columbia States rights.

Although no such plank was placed in the platform, Mrs. Worrell did enlist many delegates in the following resolution and it is her belief that if the resolution had been promulgated the delegates would have passed this resolution, namely:

"Resolved, That the delegates to the Democratic Convention favor an amendment to the Constitution of the United States granting full emancipation to the citizens of the District of Columbia and the same rights as the citizens of the various States of the Union."

There is absolutely no reason why the citizens of the District of Columbia should be penalized by taxation without representation and governed by those selected by others. LILLIAN CHENOWETH.

Mr. Lemke's 'Idiots.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I too, take exception to Mr. Lemke's reference to noncomprehensionists as "idiots" quite as much as the editorial comments thereon in The Post of July 1; Condemnation is not the way to make more money in the shortest time, must degrade me beyond hope of permanent recovery."

Lack-a-day, "the best laid plans gang agley!" A $1,000 income a week—$50,000 annual Carnegie inmost of my thoughts wholly upon a good vote getter.

It is editorial ignorance that Mr. Lemke should fear more than any other condition, because the public in their bland symplicity have been taught that superlative knowledge is to be found in editorials.

Inflation as portrayed by the press (adverse thereto) and the "cutting off of babies' fingers by the German soldiers belong in the same category," just plain bunk. We should all have sincere sympathy (not condemnation) for those whom God forgot in the distribution of inherwhelmed by business cares and with ant intelligence. F. A. BEACH.

Another McKinley.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After our experience with politics during the last three years does anyone imagine that the President and Vice President are jubilant over their renomination? We all know they were under pressure to accept, and that their refusal would have been a confession of weakness—failure on the part of the Administration.

What pleasure has Mr. Roosevelt gotten out of it? Life is too precious to devote eight of our best years to politics such as we have just passed through. Mr. Garner has expressed himself in a few written lines, but has not been permitted to open his mouth for three long years. Will he swallow his tongue for another four long years?

A Republican President and a synthetic Congress will restore prosperity, as it did in the election of Mr. McKinley during a previous depression. Try it and be convinced. The Republicans made this country what it is 50 years out of 70. FRISBEY GILBERT.
Washington, July 2.

Offsetting Voice.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Ruffner's illuminating observations pose a pertinent question for this time of the year, or, for that matter, any other time of the year. What then, is the solution for conditions aggrevated by the machine age and a subsequent surplus of human labor?

Granted, that conditions in Virginia are not isolated instances of economic piracy, aside from paper resolutions and plans, what steps should America take to eliminate the abuses of a system that has gone blundering forward toward technological advancement without giving a thought to the surplus labor power created by the mad scramble for profits engaged in by our vaunted rulers, so-called?

Mr. Ruffner is primarily concerned with the 10,000 rural young men presenting themselves to Virginia society each year in search of some kind of employment, but of the youth of America as a whole, we find that "* * * many of them have been thwarted in their desire to get an education; most of them have never had steady employment; many have not been profitably employed for even a single day. Their morale is badly shattered." For them, the unemployed youth, there is no America—no future; like the homeless waifs of Czarist Russia they are forced to drift from one end of the continent to another, from one camp, from one flophouse, from one jail or chain-gang to another—taking to crime or the road as their character fits them for the job ahead.

For the adult rural worker the situation is hardly any better, and it cannot improve so long as he is at the mercy of an obsolete system of colonial agriculture that holds the white and Negro worker in economic serfdom, denying them the inherent right to a decent wage and a higher standard of living.

Mr. Ruffner's is a voice heard out of the darkness of the feudal South, may his tribe increase to offset the infamy of the Black Legion and the Klan.

Bus Suggestion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I travel frequently from Clarendon, Va., to downtown Washington in an Arlington-Fairfax Transport Co. bus. Recently this bus line has been re-routed off Constitution avenue between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets to a narrow thoroughfare through the Mall. This thoroughfare is a two-way traffic lane and I note in making the turn off Fourteenth street the bus driver must swing his bus out into the traffic and in swinging into the Mall thoroughfare crosses into the opposite traffic lane.

It appears to me this is a dangerous operation for the safety of the traveling public. As there are several thoroughfares crossing the Mall between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets a better plan would be to provide two one-way traffic lanes at this point, or else re-route the buses back to Constitution avenue.

I am writing this as a member of the public safety committee of the Arlington County Civic Federation and am considering the safety of citizens of Arlington County in making this suggestion to the traffic officials of the District of Columbia. As many of these citizens are employed in the downtown section of Washington or are on a shopping trip their safety should be considered by District officials. THOMAS R. MECHEM.
Arlington, Va., July 3.

The Employment Struggle.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In this day of advanced science and medicine, when the average life of an individual has been extended over a larger number of years, we little pause to consider in our pleasure of a probable longer life, that this very condition in itself is a factor that is retarding our advance toward that final goal of subjugating unemployment. The reason is quite obvious.

As application of the child-labor law is further applied to our social reform, and rightly so, the general average of the age, when American youth begins work is definitely fixed; whereas, due to the prolongation of life through increased health, the time of separating one's self from the fields of employment has no specific number of years to be used as a scale, but, as we advance scientifically, we work longer, because healthy people, regardless of financial conditions, do not quit entirely. This is especially true, during a time of depressed social and economic conditions. The result is, that more people are thrown into the ranks of employment each year than are retired, the ratio of births as to deaths, still being the greater.

We all know that there are approximately 10,000,000 unemployed and that each year a general average of 1,150,000 persons are added to these, as a result of graduating from the schools and universities.

Under such restraining odds as these, it is remarkable that in three years our President headed off our fast disentegrating economic conditions, and from the brink of utter collapse led us again upward to the mountain top, where we can see hope and the lifting of the darkness o fidle despair. Bringing the ranks of the unemployed down to a number under 10,000,000 is applying an almost proportionate speed toward recovery, as we were experiencing in tobogganing down into the bowels of chaos.

It is a thing to fill our souls with delight to envision, what would have been the results if business had without fear given its wholehearted support to the cause, instead of showing at times an envious and rebellious spirit. W. H. WEAVER.

Carnegie's Ambition.

How few there are who know of Andrew Carnegie's youthful ambition expressed by an entry he made in his diary 70 years ago, when the Civil War's end found him with an annual income of $50,000.

"Beyond this never earn—make no effort to increase fortune, but spend the surplus each year for benevolent purposes. Cast aside business forever, except for others.

"Settle in Oxford and get a thorough education, making the acquaintance of literary men—this will take three years' active work—pay special attention to speaking in public.

"Settle then in London and purchase a controlling interest in some newspaper of live review and give the general management of it attention, taking part in public matters, especially those connected with education and improvement of the poorer classes.

"Man must have an idol—the amassing of wealth is one of the worst species of idolatry—no idol more debasing than the worship of money. Whatever I engage in I must push inordinately; therefore should I be careful to choose that life which will be the most elevating in its character.

"To continue much longer overcome—$1,000 a week coming to what a disappointing pass . . . years on years of $1,000 an hour, or, was it a thousand a minute.

The Post Impressionist

Who Has Remembered?

Post Office, Monday.

According to the Old Style Calendar, it was the feast of St. Jude. On the feast of St. Jude, somebody always brings a wreath of the tomb of Cardinal Stuart in St. Peter's, at Rome: because that cardinal was an heir to the British throne—and because St. Jude is the patron of lost causes.

"You knew Alexander Berkman, didn't you?" the boss asked us.

We'd known him.

"Well, are you going to give us a column on him?" the boss pursued.

And we wondered why we should "do" a column on Berkman. And the boss informed us:

"Because his death has just been announced from Nice."

One of our young radical acquaintances sauntered into the office. He is very red—real red—so red that he scorns a red tie: as bourgeois. He inquired:

"What are you writing about?"

We told him.

"Berkman?" echoed this modern revolutionist. "Who's he?"

* * *

Died last week on the Riviera. For years and years Berkman had been in another world. Probably he was never in the real world at all . . .

Yet once upon a time his name was in every American mouth—and generally as an anathema.

Those were the days when to call a man a social-revolutionist was to mean that he was an anarchist—the days when a few people still read Bakhunin—the days of Kropotkin in London, Johan Most in Chicago—the New York days of Emma Goldman and Hippolyte Havel. If you ran into a riot ever so innocently, and it could be proven that you had ever heard an oration by Berkman, you were, to all intents and purposes, already in the chain-gang.

Berkman began, like most anarchists, as a practical anarchist. Without any personal malice whatsoever, he tried to kill Henry C. Frick, chairman of the Carnegie Steel Co.—but only wounded him.

Berkman was sentenced to 22 years in prison, served about 14 of them, but emerged, also like most anarchists, as a philosophical anarchist.

Few people knew that he nearly broke jail, or that, rather, jail was almost broken for him. He once told your columnist how the tunnel, that certain friends dug for him needed merely one more day's work.

But it was discovered.

He wrote a book on his prison experiences. Somewhere, we still have our copy, autographed for us in its author's big round chirography. It was a rather well-done book.

But it was a financial failure.

The Post-Impressionist recalls Berkman as a tall, raw-boned, expressionless person, of speech very slow, of voice very low—in ordinary conversation. He had a timid manner. He was extremely pale—as if he could never shed the prison pallor. He was extremely near-sighted—which perhaps explains why his Pittsburgh pistol was so ineffective.

* * *

He was a true Communits: private property was a misdemeanor. But he was a true anarchist: government was a felony.

Let us, therefore, abolish property! Let us doubly abolish government!

And yet, in his post-prison phase—which was when we knew him—he was, in practice, among the mildest of human beings. He may sometimes have preached violence: he lived in almost monastic quiet. He may sometimes have advocated license: all gossip to the contrary notwithstanding, he imposed upon himself an almost monastic restraint.

Somebody once wrote a story about a terrorist who wanted to die for human liberty, but who died of a broken heart because of the death of a canary, which he had long kept shut up in a cage. Somebody—wasn't it Lomax Hunter, of Richmond?—once wrote a poem about an assassin who, fleeing through the woods from the closely following police, nearly broke his leg in an endeavor to avoid trampling on some wild violets.

The Berkman we knew might have been either of these men.

Revolutionist Berkman greeted the Russian revolution with peans of praise. He rushed to Russia. He found revolutionary Russia capitalism behind a mask, government intensified. He cursed it, it exiled him. The Russian revolution was as deep a disappointment to the anarchist as to the Czar.

* * *

Berkman's life was a failure devoted to a foredoomed cause: not only a wrong cause—a cause thoroughly impracticable. And his death was symbolic of his whole life, a not grotesquely altered echo of the Frick affair. He wanted to kill himself instantly, by a shot through the heart; he missed his heart—and died slowly from a wound in the lungs.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Highway Declaration of Independence.

With apologies to the New York Automobile Club.

1. When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for a large element of the population to climb into automobiles, a decent respect for ambulance surgeons, police and pedestrains requires that they give common sense a reasonable workout.

2. We hold that all men are created equal and that this goes for women and children.

3. We hold that they are endowed with certain unalienable rights, and that, if not, they are at least entitled to think so.

4. We hold that among these rights are life, liberty and the desire to get between two given points without jumping, sliding or pole vaulting.

5. We hold that the term life as used herein is taken to mean an existence not confined to living in a cyclone cellar, tree-top, trench, dugout, or cross-arm of a telephone pole.

6. We hold liberty as herein used to mean freedom to cross a street for a bag of potatoes without consulting the wishes of a pop-eyed idiot at the wheel of a limousine or a cold-hearted Attila driving a police car or fire auto.

7. We purposely eliminate the phrase "pursuit of happiness" from this declaration because we appreciate that too many people think happiness is something indelibly linked with the pursuit of picnic grounds, hot dogs, tourist camps, Joe's Seaside Rotisserie and a battle with red ants, mosquitoes, ptomaine poisoning and traffic lights.

8. We hold it to be self-evident that a red light is by no means a green light and that a green light is never used merely because the police have run out of red lights.

9. We hold it to be self-evident that a sign, "Slow Down. School Ahead," does not herald the approach to the International Speedway, the old Vanderbilt Motor Parkway or the course for a new speed test by Maj. Campbell.

10. We hold it to be self-evident that the purpose of a white line in the middle of a highway is to divide traffic into two opposite lanes and that it is a proof of idiocy to assume that it was put there by some coalminers to pay an election bet.

11. We hold it to be self-evident that "No Turns on Red" is not synonomous with "Waltz Me Around Again, Willie."

12. We hold it to be self-evident that an automobile is an instrument capable of destruction when not properly handled and that the technique is slightly more involved than that which is required in peeling a banana, winding a watch or playing puss-in-the-corner.

13. We hold it to be self-evident that nobody desires the high light of an automobile trip to be a maltese cross in the morning papers showing where the tree was before the car hit it.

14. We therefore declare ourselves in a state of revolt against the traditions and customs of motoring, pledge ourselves for a New Deal in traffic, and hope for the best.

The 1936 Election Result.

Despite the picture of the coming election as a battle of greed versus humanity, it is, as always, just a battle of greed versus greed and the voters on the winning side will, true to traditions, believe they are all humanitarians de luxe.

Mr. Raymond Moley, formerly a head brain in the Brain Trust, says there has been too much tearing of passions to tatters. "It is not going to be a good year for o'erdoing Termagant or out-Heroding Herod," he declares. Maybe Mons. Moley thinks, as many do, that Alf Landon may panic the voters by the mere expedient of appearing calm and talking very slowly.

In fact, it is this department's conviction that the best thing Mr. Landon could possibly do to win voters is to seem pretty uncertain about everything and wind up his speeches with, "I'm sorry but the whole situation's got me guessing, and you'll have to excuse me."

It cost the National Broadcasting Co. $265,457 to broadcast the two major conventions. This is getting off with the minimum penalty and shows that there is no disposition just now to let the punishment fit the crime.

The League Stands

Nations' Brotherhood to Gain in Strength, Says Sweetser.

By Barnet Nover.

There is far more confidence at Geneva in the continued existence of the League of Nations than there is in the continuance of peace. This is the considered view of Arthur Sweetser one of the directors in the League Secretariat who is in Washington on a brief visit.

"This might seem like a paradox. In view of what is now happening at Geneva, many believe that the League faces collapse. Certainly many would take the position that the outbreak of a world war would inevitably mean the disappearance of the League. Yet it can be taken for granted that whatever happens the League will continue. It has proved to be such a fundamental and indispensable agency in international relations that it would survive even another world war. Unquestionably it will survive the present crisis.

"The fact of the matter is," Mr. Sweetser continued, "that in considering the League's future it is necessary to lengthen our focus, to pull out the telescope. It is not a movement or an agency that depends for its success or its failure on one particular event. It is part of a long sweep of history and if we take this long-range view the present and other crises tend to flatten themselves out.

ARTHUR SWEETSER.

Tensions Rising.

"There can be no doubt that the tensions today are rising. At a time when nations are steadily being compelled to come closer to each other, when the mechanical, commercial, financial and even emotional tendencies crowd the world together as never before, composite tendencies are also on the march. There has been a decided increase in the nationalistic spirit. Each nation is being driven back into itself. Tariffs, armaments, supernationalist emotions have the upper hand. These tendencies are driving the nations toward war. But it is partly because of these separatist tendencies that the League has come to be accepted as an essential part of the modern world, unifying what intense nationalism tends to tear apart."

Mr. Sweetser has been with the League since it began in 1920. He was for years second man, then acting head of the information section, and now has the rank of director attached to the principal officers of the secretariat.

He recalls that when the League started, it was a little more than a collection of 100 or so officals and a bare Covenant of 26 articles. It had little form or substance. It was simply an idea let loose in a world weary of war.

"In those days," he says, "we used to thumb the peace treaties to see what references they had to the League and what tasks we had to do. For a long time it was the secretariat which gave the League its principal impulse and direction. In those days, too, the League was preeminently a European agency dealing for the most part with certain special localized problems such as the Saar, Danzig, Upper Silesia, etc. The non-European nations, while most of them quickly joined the organization, did not, for some time, show any marked activity in its deliberations.

Situation Different.

The situation today is completely different, Mr. Sweetser points out. Now practically every foreign office in the world has its own group of experts and jurists, who know the minutiae of League problems as well as do the experts at Geneva. A great many nations maintain permanent staffs in the Swiss city so as better to keep in touch with League developments. And the amount of work done by the League has grown enormously.

"During these past 16 years," Mr. Sweetser says, "the League has become the medium of international co-operation in an infinite number of ways. In dealing with such problems as health, opium, and a whole host of technical, humanitarian and other problems, the League is decisively established. With regard to them, you cannot conceive of a world without the League, no matter what world-shaking political developments may occur. And this substratum of international activity provides a firm foundation around which the wider League, the league of peace, has been and is being built.

Mr. Sweetser does not hide the fact that this peace-preservation League is going through a period of great crisis as a result of the Italo-Ethiopian dispute. But he believes that this crisis may have some good consequences as well as bad for the Geneva organization. Nor does he believe that the recent notice of resignation from Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua foreshadows any wholesale abandonment of the League by its members.

"The feeling at Geneva," says Mr. Sweetser, "is that the League, like any human organization, will develop unevenly. It will have its moments of strength and its moments of weakness. Its power and prestige stood extremely high last October. They are admittedly low now. The League is obviously passing through a crisis.

Predicts New Era.

"But I have no doubt it will pick up again. People at Geneva certainly have no illusion that the League is unchangeable or unadaptable. The stresses and strains to which it has been subjected differ little from the stresses and strains to which national governments are subjected. And they provide the necessary stimulus to make the organization more effective in the future.

"Contradictory though it may seem at first glance, it is nevertheless true that confidence in the continued existence of the League is higher today, despite the present crisis, than ever before in its history.

"Before the League's potentialities had been tested, nobody knew how much resiliency it had. Nobody knew what it could and could not do. Hence, when the first crisis occurred, there were widespread fears that the League might collapse. But that is over now. People are not worrying about the League as much as about the issues it finds itself compelled to deal with. The very circumstances that there is so much talk today about the need of applying the lessons learned from the first application of sanctions shows that the League is a permanent institution, whose procedure may be changed, whose activities may be curbed or extended, but whose continuance in behalf of the attainment of world peace is no longer a subject of debate.

Asked what the outlook was for making the League into a fully effective instrument of war prevention, Mr. Sweetser replied that in this matter, too, it is necessary to take the long term point of view. He does not believe that the League can be expected to provide complete security any more than any existing government, however long established in power, can give absolute security against violations of law, robberies, murders, riots or even civil war.

Schools of Thought.

"There are and probably always will be two schools of thought on the question of whether the League should have big teeth or little. Which tendency will ultimately win out is unpredictable. But my own feeling is that in the long run the League is bound to develop into a strong agency of law with powerful means of enforcement. And I daresay that will be true even if there is a war. For there is no going back to the old system of complete anarchy in an ever-contrasting world.

"But we must not forget in this connection that the League as a war-preventing agency has again and again proved a reality. Its failures, however, are always more dramatic, more newsworthy than its successes. It will always be clear when there is a war and therefore very easy to blame the League for not having prevented it. But it is, of course, impossible to prove that there would have been war except for the League's constructive work.

"Personally, I feel certain that, had it not been for the League, a war would have followed the Marseille murders in October, 1934. In the past, wars have broken out with much less provocation. But though tensions rose to the boiling point in the Balkans after the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia, the nations involved took their grievances to Geneva, fought the matter out over the Council table rather than on the field of battle and finally achieved a settlement. That the League then prevented war seems to me indisputable. Yet it cannot be proved as it can be proved that, despite the existence of the League, war occurred in East Africa.

War Almost Came.

"I think it is also arguable that, had the League not been in existence in March, 1935, when Germany moved troops into the demilitarized zone, there would also have been war. The failures of the League are advertised; too often its successes are unrealized or attributed to other causes."

Mr. Sweetser does not believe that the discussion at the September Assembly on the subject of modifying the Covenant will lead to any drastic change in that organic law. He believes that the experience of the last months has shown that the Covenant as it stands gives adequate powers for the task the League has to perform; that it is really the policies of the member governments which need stiffening if the League is to be effective.

The tendency seems to be, he believes, to keep the Covenant but to modify and improve the methods of enforcing it. From this point of view the Italo-Ethiopian crisis and the history of the first use of sanctions may prove a valuable guide to future action. The increasing advocacy of special regional agreements, many of which are already in existence, to apply military sanctions while League members in general limit their action to the application of financial and economic sanctions, indicates the use being made of experience.

"Cynics and scoffers," said Mr. Sweetser in conclusion," may find it grimly amusing that just at this time the League should have moved into its new building on a hill overlooking Lake Leman. They are calling this structure the 'mausoleum' of the Geneva organization. But such cynicism, he believes, is premature.

"Like the new building the League is still an unfinished structure. Learning from the experience derived from living in it, certain rooms will be rearranged; new wings may from time to time be added thus changing the general appearance. But the foundations and the framework of the League, like the foundations and the framework of the League palace, are built on rock."

Stalin Blocks Bi-Party State In Soviet Union

'We Are Still Far Behind United States,' Says Dictator's Aid.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, July 5.—A promise by Joseph Stalin that the Soviet Union will avoid an electoral system under which one party could defeat the government and take its place was quoted today in a speech by G. K. Ordjonikidse, commissar of heavy industry.

The reference to Stalin's words was deemed by observers to be particularly important in view of the change in electoral procedure provided by Russia's new constitution, which will establish direct and secret voting for the election of two new legislative chambers.

In addition to the Communist Party, social organizations, trade unions and a few other nonpolitical groups will have the right to put forth candidates.

Urges Self-Criticism.

Stalin was quoted as saying that since defeat of the government by a rival party would not be possible in the Soviet Union, the Bolshevik principle of self-criticism must be developed to the fullest extent.

"Any criticism of our failings must come from ourselves," he added. "The more we develop this practice, the more quickly we will be able to correct our errors."

Ordjonikidse addressed the council for development of heavy industry. He announced that certain branches of Soviet industry had surpassed the rest of Europe in output and efficiency, but added:

"We are still far behind the United States."

Recommending an increased study of American methods, he said the productivity of labor in the United States was double that in the Soviet Union.

To Cleanse Schools.

The Communist Party decided today to cleanse Soviet schools of so-called advanced and scientific teaching methods and to restore the old-fashioned schoolmaster with complete and undisputed authority.

The teaching of pedology (child study) is to be abolished and all published books on that theory will be criticized severely by the official press.

The party edict followed a meeting of its central committee, where "scientific classifiers of children" were accused of instituting an imported bourgeois system dressed up in Marxist phraseology.

A published statement charged that the purpose of their tactics was to attempt to carry out the theory of higher and lower classes and races, based on the fatalistic idea that the capacity of children depends upon biological and social factors, and their heritage.

Under the pedological system, the statement said, thousands of normal children have been classified as backward and segregated in special schools.

These schools are to be reorganized and most of the pupils re-transferred to schools for normal children.

Officer Hurt in Fight With Prisoner Better

Policeman Henry H. Prince, Eighth Precinct, injured seriously Saturday while arresting a colored man suspected of snatching a pocketbook, was reported slightly improved yesterday in Garfield Hospital.

Prince suffered head and back injuries when the man threw him from his motorcycle at Eighteenth street and Columbia road northwest. Prince later arrested the man at Fourteenth and Newton streets northwest. He fell unconscious as Tenth Precinct police responded to an emergency call.

St. Gabriel Parade Route Is Changed

For the first time since its inception 17 years ago, the route of the parade which annually opens St. Gabriel's Church carnival has been changed. It was shortened yesetrday out of consideration for the small children who are marching.

The parade will start as usual at Eighth and Randolph streets northwest at 7 p. m. and run east to Georgia avenue. Instead of running north as far as Farragut street, it will turn east at Decatur street to Illinois avenue and then south to the carnival grounds at Grant Circle.

The parade will be led by the American Legion Massed Color Corps, Chairman Thomas A. McNamara announced yesterday. Among the bands will be those of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club, Knights of Columbus, Elks Club and Sons of the American Legion.

Pilot, 2 Passengers Killed in Crash

Norfolk, Va., July 5 (AP).—Garnett H. Tonkin, 36, of Norfolk, was killed, and two other men, Melvin D. Sawyer, 23, of East Lake, N. C., and Albert Murray Gard, 25, of Manns Harbor, N. C., were fatally injuried in the crash of an airplane piloted by Tonkin, near Nags Head, on the North Carolina coast this morning.

The crash occurred about 7:45 a. m. The plane struck near a cottage on the Currituck Sound side of the beach. Tonkin died from a broken neck, and the others died en route to a Norfolk hospital.

Tonkin was manager here for the Leckie Coal Co., wholesale and mine operators.

30,000 Spanish Reds Are Urged to Revolt

Oviedo, Spain, July 5 (U.P.).—Leaders of the Spanish Communist Society tonight urged reds to take up arms against the government. The plea was made at an open-air meeting attended by more than 30,000 Communist, including men, women and children.

The government was accused of favoring capital over labor. Leaders said a popular front was the only barrier labor could construct against the force of reaction.

rounded Federal program for drought relief, co-ordinating the activities of all Federal agencies.

Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, on Saturday announced plans for co-operating with the Resettlement Administration in helping to remove families from the worst drought areas. WPA jobs also are to be provided for families in need.

The Weather Bureau reported yesterday there had been no rain in the morning in the most seriously affected areas in the Midwest, and that there was no immediate prospect of a break in the drought.

At the AAA, officials said the cattle-buying program announced last week to aid farmers would be inaugurated slowly, and that it was hoped comparatively few cattle have to be bought. It was emphasized there would be no immediate heavy purchases.

Attention was centered upon the July 10 general crop report when the first official forecast of 1936 spring wheat production will be made. This report is expected to indicate accurately the actual drought damage to all major crops in the Midwest.

Four Crushed to Death As Automobile Hits Tree

De Kalb, Ill., July 5 (AP).—Four persons were crushed to death today when their automobile hit a tree and folded up like an accordion.

The crash reduced the length of the wheelbase of the car by more than half. A wrecking crew worked half an hour chaining the front of the car to the tree and the rear bumper to a truck towing car, to pull the machine far enough into shape to permit removal of the bodies.

The dead were Carl Alber, 30, and J. O. Dirks, 30, of Kansas City, Mo., employed at Mount Morris, Ill.; Arlene Rohns, 22, of Mount Morris, and Isabel Wagner, 21, of Freeport, Ill. The accident occurred after the car sideswiped another.

Relief to Steel Workers drive for industrial unionization, in a statement characterized these pronouncements as attempts to make the workers believe the committee for industrial organization was "interested only in precipitating disorder and causing strikes."

Council Meets Thursday.

By the Associated Press.

The American Federation of Labor's executive council will meet Thursday to decide whether to press charges of "dual unionism" against John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and his associates in the campaign to organize all steel employes.

Observers saw three possible courses for the council to take:

(1) To suspend Lewis' United Workers and the 11 other unions associated with them from the federation.

(2) To drop the charges and join Lewis in his drive to bring every steel mill employe into the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, an A. F. of L. union.

(3) To direct a committee to try to make peace between the warring craft and industrial union factions, but to keep the "dual unionism" charges on the books for use in case the peace efforts failed.

Some labor leaders thought the peace move was most probable, in view of the steel industry's vow to keep the open shop.

Such an effort, these leaders said, would tend to unite labor, even though it did not completely heal the wounds opened by the long craft-industrial union war.

A "dual union" is a union outside the A. F. of L. that takes in members eligible to a union belonging to the federation. The council's charges against Lewis and his associates contain one general and one specific count.

The general count is formation of the "committee for industrial organization" to promote unionization of mass production workers by industry, regardless of their eligibility to craft unions.

The specific count is against the committee's support of the Radio and Electrical Workers Union. The federation refused to charter that union after deciding to organize radio workers into the electrical workers' union.

Lewis' support of the Marine and Shipyard Workers Industrial Union, a "dual" organization, and his avowal to disregard craft lines in organizing steel, automobile and rubber workers, also figure in the picture.

The council is controlled by craft union leaders, and 9 of the 15 likely to vote were reported last week to favor suspension of the Mine Workers and the 11 other unions. Whether they would want to take this action in view of the steel industry's proclamation and the lack of unanimity, however, is another question, observers believe.

Coroner Plans Inquiry in Boy's Death in Plunge

Refuses Certificate Until Inspector Examines Fire Escape.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald refused to issue a death certificate yesterday in the death of William Jones, 9, who died in Emergency Hospital Saturday after he fell three floors from a fire escape.

Dr. MacDonald said he is holding up the certificate until a District building inspector examines the fire escape in the rear of the boy's home, 1489 Newton street northwest, to determine if it conforms with regulations.

The boy, who had been warned by his mother, Mrs. William L. Jones, not to play on the fire escape, had gone into the apartment to get a glass of water. Apparently trying to tease his mother, he ran down a corridor and got out on the third-floor landing of the safety device.

He slipped under a protective rail and fell three floors. He died of a fractured skull a few hours later.

Local Theaters Line Up Screen And Stage Hits

Capital Executives Make Known Their Plans for Impending Weeks.

Numerous big name stage attractions have been lined up for Loew's Fox Theater during the next 60 days, Carter T. Barron, Loew's Eastern division manager, announced last night.

Included in this array of "in person" stars are George Olsen and his orchestra, with Ethel Shutta; the famous Duncan sisters, celebrated for their "Topsy and Eva" roles; Guy Robertson, famous movie star, and the New York musical, "Spring Is Here," in which Ernest Truex is the star.

Both Mr. Barron and Gene Ford, manager of the Fox, wish to emphasize that "Spring Is Here" is not merely a musical tabloid, but a legitimate New York production, employing a real Broadway chorus, scenery, music and costumes. This musical comedy, one of the outstanding hits several seasons ago, played only on Broadway and in London.

Photographed Stage Play.

Stage productions translated to the screen will be an important part of Warner Bros.-First National-Cosmopolitan releases during the 1936-37 season. No less than eight plays, and possibly more, will be represented in the attractions coming to the Earle and Metropolitan Theaters here.

Six of the eigth stage plays have been presented on the stage in Washington. The most recent was "Sweet Aloes," starring Evelyn Laye, which will be presented on the screen as "Give Me Your Heart." Kay Francis, George Brent and Roland Young will have the leading roles.

Also seen last season was "Call it a Day," the Dodie Smith play, co-starring Philip Merrivale and Gladys Cooper. This current production is scheduled for early screen presentation.

One of the most important features of the list is the long-awaited screen version of "Green Pastures," co-directed by Marc Connelly and William Keighly. Rex Ingram heads an all-colored cast and the film, which already has been previewed on the West Coast, has won high praises.

Another hit, "Three Men on a Horse" will feature an all-comedy cast headed by Frank McHugh, as Erwin, the demon horsepicker. Mervyn LeRoy will direct.

"A Slight Case of Murder," by Howard Lindsay and Damon Runyon is the single mystery-drama on the list of play adaptations.

Three musicals will be produced from stage hits: "The Desert Song," to be made in Technicolor, with James Melton starred; "The Fortune Hunter," a vehicle for Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler; and "White Horse Inn," to be produced by Eric Charell, who first presented this European success at Radio City, N. Y.

Neighborhoods Not Slighted.

Outstanding pictures from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios in Hollywood will be presented during the 1936-37 season at all of Warner Bros. Neighborhood Theaters in Washington, following their first run presentations downtown at Loew's Fox, Palace and Columbia Theaters.

John J. Payette, general zone manager of Warner Bros. theaters in the Washington territory, and Rudolph Berger, general manager of the M-G-M Exchange here, have signed contracts covering the new season. Warner Bros. new Uptown Theater, Connecticut Avenue above Macomb street, and the new Sheridan Theater, 6217 Georgia avenue, were covered by the arrangement, which also includes the other Warner houses in all parts of the city—the Ambassador, Apollo, Avalon, Avenue Grand, Central, Colony, Home, Savoy, Tivoli, York and Penn theaters.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will present a minimum of 44 and a maximum of 53 productions during the season. Details of 33 of these features were announced at the recent M-G-M sales convention.

"THE MAN OF ARAN." Gaumont British release of Robert Flaherty's scenic-drama filmed on the Isle of Aran, featuring Colman King, Maggie Dirrane and Michael Dillane. Photographed by Paul Ivano. Musical score by John Greenwood. Directed by Robert Flaherty.
"IF I HAD A MILLION." Paramount production, featuring Charles Laughton, Gary Cooper, William C. Fields, Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland and all-star cast. Reviewed Sunday afternoon by W. A. Whitney.

Life is hard and earnest on the Isle of Aran, but the vicarious traveler to those rock-bound coasts can little realize how hard and how earnest until he has witnessed "The Man of Aran."

Superbly photographed by Paul Ivano and augmented by an excellent musical score by John Greenwood, this Robert Flaherty production recounts the life of those brave insular fisherfolk as reflected by Colman (Tiger) King, Maggie Dirrane and Michael Dillane, respectively as father, mother and son.

While the picture may seem long—the story aspects not furnishing quite enough narrative to carry all the scenic shots—the technical treatment is unusual, making the ocean perhaps the most important of the entire roster of principal characters, for it is against the sea the Aranic struggle for existence is waged.

Virtually going from the ridiculous to the sublime, this combination of "If I Had a Million," with its comic star cast, and "The Man of Aran" indeed exemplifies those extremes which have made the motion picture the great art it is.

Selected short subjects and a newsreel round out a program which, in its entirety, is one of the most striking the Little Theater has presented.

Potomac River Death Laid to Heart Attack

Hagerstown, Md., July 5.—Finding that Eugene Neikirk, 35, a member of a local haberdashery firm, was seized with a heart attack before failing into the Potomac River at Blackford's Landing yesterday, Magistrate C. Edward Heard, acting coroner, decided an inquest was unnecessary. Neikirk's body was recovered from the river, which was only 18 inches deep at the spot. He had been fishing from the bank. His widow, Mrs. Bessie Neikirk, and a daughter survive.

About The Showshops

WHETHER you are aware of the fact or not, Saturday's Fourth of July holiday was a freak day in Washington amusement annals.

There was, to begin with, a tremendous exodus of week-end vacationers to the Jersey shore resorts and other comparatively remote playgrounds; the double-header between the Nationals and the New York Yankees in Mr. Griffith's concrete ballyard attracted approximately 38,000, to watch the hometown boys take it on the chin twice, and, that night, all of the baseball crowd, plus 62,000 other casual wayfarers, packed onto the Ellipse to watch the pretty firecrackers, pin-wheels and skyrockets.

BELL.

Despite all this competitive "draw," both downtown first-run motion picture houses and the neighborhood theaters "packed 'em in" all day at night prices. At the Earle, the matinee patronage was a shade heavier than at night, although at the beginning of the last show there were standees on the orchestra floor. The Fox's Fourth outdrew last year's to an almost unbelievable extent. Last year the attraction was Edward Arnold, in person, over and above the usual screen and stage bill, but business was only 45 per cent of last Saturday's.

This condition in Washington's two downtown theaters presenting both film and vaudeville bills, was reflected in all of the other midtown cinemas and extended also to the outlying al fresco resorts. Glen Echo Park reports the biggest Independence Day patronage in the history of the popular amusement center and private advices from Colonial Beach are to the effect that the distant river spot was overrun with more visitors than it could comfortably accommodate.

Where did all of these amusement-seekers come from? One explanation is that the hegira of Washington residents was largely offset by incoming hordes of out-of-town visitors intent on holidaying in the National Capital—which reminds me of the method of procedure that used to be followed down in the tropics when one of the big excursion liners would drop anchor in the harbor. All of the tourists would break their necks getting ashore to see the sights and the launches that brought them in would return to the ship packed to the gunwales with townspeople anxious to get a squint at the palatial trappings of the floating hotel.

It was a nice arrangement that left everything even and everybody happy at the end of the day. That's the way it was here Saturday.

• • • •

What has become of Maxine Doyle, former mistress of ceremonies at the Earle for three years, then a decoration of the films for a year or two and now of the stage? A fortnight ago, Max was headlining with a stage act at the State-Lake Theater in Chicago and phoned a Washington friend that the next week would be played in Pittsburgh, the next in Philadelphia, the one after that in Baltimore and then Washington. I wouldn't be sure about Pittsburgh, but Philadelphia and Baltimore never came off. Washington, one learns from a little birdie, however, still has a nebulous, outside chance of seeing its former favorite adopted daughter on a downtown stage sometime around the week of July 24—maybe a little later, probably not a minute before, perhaps not at all. Nevertheless, there it is for what it is worth—if anything.

In spite of summer heat, vacations, taxes, hell and high water, both Division Manager Carter Tate Barron, of Loew's, Inc., and Gene Ford, manager of Loew's Fox Theater, insist that practically every essential preparation has been made for the fourth annual production of the Fox's local talent revue, "Going Native," to be staged the week of August 14.

Auditions for principals will be held on Monday and Tuesday, July 13 and 14—next week, mind you—in special studios on the third floor of the Loew Columbia Theater Building, formerly known as the Metzerott Building, Twelfth and F streets, at 7:30 p. m. Auditions for members of the chorus will be held in the same place and at the same hour on Wednesday, July 15.

Several skits, chorus routines and songs already have been tentatively whipped into shape by the versatile Mr. Ford, who soon will have all of the material necessary for the show in hand.

From what I hear of one possible musical novelty, it will be worth watching at every performance, if for no other reason, just to be there when the darndest dog fight you've ever seen in a theater really comes off!

• • • •

With Johnny Mann quietly going about the business of getting Erwin Shaw's play of "Bury the Dead" into shape for early fall presentation by the New Theater acting company of Washington, Robert Porterfield is beating him to the punch, in a manner of speaking, by putting on the provocative antiwar work in his Barter Theater down in Abingdon, Va., on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. Mr. Porterfield left the New York cast of the play, which is still running on Broadway, to take part in his own production in Abingdon, where admission to the theater may be purchased with postage stamps, produce, canned goods, live stock, or what have you that you're using for money. Doris Rich, Alice Buchanan and Robert Strauss will appear with the Abingdon entrepreneur at the head of a cast of 30 speaking parts.

Movie Boners

Hollywood, July 5.

In the flicker, "San Francisco," writes Iggie Guerrero, Jeanette MacDonald is singing the song of that title and she is wearing an orchid. Suddenly the flower disappears. However, a few scenes later, Miss MacDonald is still singing the same song, and presto, the orchid reappears.

BETTE DAVIS.

"George Brent borrowed a bathing suit from Bette Davis in the sequence on the yacht in the picture, 'The Golden Arrow,'" claims Irene Bates. When Brent left the yacht he didn't have a package with him. Yet in a later scene, when Brent is on the beach with another society girl, he has on the same bathing suit which Miss Davis loaned him."

Irene doesn't believe it was nice of George to keep the suit.

Charles Collins in the flicker, "Dancing Pirate," takes a long umbrella and hides it under his trousers—which is a neat trick by itself. "Not only is there no bulge," writes Augustine Ponte, "but Collins can stoop, kneel and move freely although the umbrella would probably reach from his thigh to below the knee." Perhaps they had flexible umbrellas in those days? . . . or perhaps Collins played the entire scene without really having the umbrella there.

Fred MacMurray in the flicker, "The Princess Comes Across," is rehearsing his band for the concert that evening. In fact, states Estella Balocca, MacMurray is most anxious that they be excellent. But, when the concert is flashed on the screen, Fred is the only one who plays. Just a soloist at heart.

Also in "The Princess Comes Across," MacMurray's friend steals Carole Lombard's bag—which the detective placed on the chair—and MacMurray returns the bag. However, says Ben Carlton, when the detective took Lombard's bag it was made of cloth and in the handle of the bag there was a pair of gloves. The bag MacMurray returned was of leather and contained no gloves.

In the flicker, "Boulder Dam," writes Sylvia Seinman, Ross Alexander, after the fight scene, is given a dented lunch box. Yet in the next scene Alexander is seen with the lunch box, but now it appears to be new and is not dented.

And in sending in a movie boner about the flicker, "Private Number," P. Gross recently made a fan boner.

He writes: "In 'Private Number,' Joan Crawford bids Robert Montgomery good-by as he returns to college in the pouring rain, and she leads the great Dane Hamlet through the rain with her. As soon as they enter her bedroom Hamlet is so nice and dry that he gets into her bed."

RKO-RadioHas Greedy Eye on Foreign Stage

Will Send Talent Scout to England and Continent; Coast Previews.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, July 5.—Complaining that there isn't enough star material in America to go around, Sam Briskin, RKO-Radio production chief, is set to launch a large-scale talent raid on England and Europe.

Briskin named Margot Fragey, head of RKO's foreign department, raider in chief. She leaves for London July 15 with a trunkful of contract blanks and her eye peeled for screen possibilities.

Either Briskin has a poor opinion of foreign screen talent or believes it too well protected to be lifted, for Miss Fragey will do her scouting in legitimate theaters. She'll look over the situation in England, Ireland and Scotland, then cross the Channel to skirmish France, Germany, Austria and perhaps Italy and Spain.

Briskin launched a campaign to build up RKO's contract lists a year ago, and has since signed 17 new players, most notably Joe Penner, Herbert Marshall, Parkyakarkus, Joe E. Brown and Ann Sothern.

Not only is stardust scarce in America, but established players have a tendency toward cutting down their outputs, Briskin says.

Shows of the Week.

"DOWN TO THE SEAS." (Republic).

War among the sponge divers of the Florida Keys is fashioned into a novel "B" class melodrama by this up-and-coming independent studio. The picture lacks major names, but makes up for it in enterprise and freshness, and the result is very presentable entertainment.

Russell Hardie and Ben Lyon are featured as male leads, with Lyon having somewhat the better of it in a hard-boiled, swashbuckling role as boasting, top diver of the fleet. The two are rival leaders of feudist factions, and, naturally, are also at odds over affections of the girl, Ann Rutherford.

Irving Pichel contributes a good performance as the heavy, playing the murderous captain of a poaching trawler who attempts to cast blame on Lyon for a killing done by himself. Pichel purposely raises Lyon from the depths too fast, but Lyon, although dying of the divers' malady, "bends," saves his rival and the girl from the captain's plot.

Director Lewis Collins maintains suspense skillfully, and photography by Harry Neumann is first class. Submarine shots are especially good.

"THREE CHEERS FOR LOVE." (Paramount).

Eleanor E. Whitney and Robert Cummings top a fair to middling "B" musical, based on the trite story of a theatrical troupe invading a girls' seminary disguised as pupils.

Whitney is the only bona fide student. She falls in love with Cummings, a song writer, who joins the faculty as music instructor, and William Frawley, as head of the troupe, puts on a show hoping her movie-magnate father, John Halliday, will buy it, which he eventually does for the happy ending.

Picture is designed chiefly to show off Whitney's dancing routines as plotted by Danny Dare. Louis Da Pron rates second hoofing honors, and Olympe Bradna, a newcomer, shows screen promise in a dramatic role.

"Swing Top," and "Where Is My Heart?" are best of the musical numbers composed by Ralph Rainger and Leo Robbin. Ray McCarey directed.

"THE BRIDE WALKS OUT." (RKO-Radio).

Barbara Stanwick, Gene Raymond and Helen Broderick give this comedy a brighter polish than its weak and obvious story deserves.

It is the familiar tale of a proud but low-salaried husband whose wife leaves him because she admires millionaires, but eventually returns to him to "save him from himself."

Players turn in uniformly good performances, and Leigh Jason, directing, maintains a pace fast enough to keep the plot from falling apart. (Ed. note: All of which was set forth in Saturday's review of the bill at RKO-Keith's.)

"Toning" Up for a Busy Studio Day

Mrs. Franchot Tone, Joan Crawford to the public and Mrs. Lucille Le Sueur-Tone in the family Bible, is a habitual swimming pool plunger-inner during the heated term. She is shown here poised for a dive into the cooling depths of the splendiferous splashatorium sunk in the back yard of her famous Brentwood Heights home in the general vicinage of Hollywood. Miss Crawford and her actor-husband, Franchot Tone, also are bears for badminton and some day we will show you the picture of Miss Crawford going into the air for a high one. Just now, though, she is busy on "The Gorgeous Hussy," her first large-scale costume vehicle, with Lionel Barrymore, Robert Taylor, Melvyn Douglas, James Stewart and Alison Skipworth.

The Federal Diary

By Betty Read.

A decision affecting almost every regular Government employe—past, present or future—and dealing with taxation of annuities paid to retired civil service employes was handed down recently.

With many thousands of dollars paid out in annuities to retired workers each year, the decision is important primarily because it touches the lives of so many men and women rather than because of the actual sum of tax money that will accrue to the Government from this source. The decision came from the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

The average annuity, by and large, is $1,200, and the new ruling deals with the method of payment of income tax.

The ruling came as a result of a request from a $1,200-a-year annuitant who wished to know the exact way he should figure his income for tax purposes. The decision in relation to this case which will have general application, is quoted in part.

"If an annuity is payable in two or more installments over each 12-month period, such portion of each installment shall be taxable as is equal to 3 per cent of the aggregate premiums or consideration paid for such annuity, divided by the number of installments payable during such years," the ruling reads.

"The consideration paid by the annuitant in the present case is held to include the amount credited to the tontine account and to exclude the interest credited to his individual account. Applying the law and regulations to the facts presented, $5.70 ($2,281.91×.03=$68.4573÷12) is the portion of the annuity payment of $100 each month which is subject to Federal income tax. For the six months of 1935 the annuitant received $600. Of this sum, $34.20 ($5.70×6) is the part which should be included in the annuitant's gross income for that year and the remainder, $565.80, should not be returned as income.

Assuming that like provisions will be in effect for the years 1936 and 1937, $68.45 (3 per cent of $2,281.91) of the annuity for 1936 will be taxable and $1,131.55 will not be taxable. The total amount to be excluded from gross income for 1935 and 1936 is, therefore, $1,697.35. This leaves $584.56 ($2,281.91 minus $1,697.35) to be excluded from gross income for 1937. Consequently, of the annuity of $1,200 to be received in that year, $615.44, or the difference between the annuity and the excluded sum of $584.56, is the amount which will be included as taxable income in the annuitant's return for that year.

The sum of $2,281.91 is the amount the annuitant paid for the annuity by amounts withheld from his compensation.

Farm Reservoirs Built.

Plans are being worked out at the Soil Conservation Service for putting many of the Nation's farmers to work building tiny farm reservoirs and dams, ditches, terraces and other devices to hold water, so that when the drought ends in the Middle West they will be prepared to conserve the precious rainwater.

Crops are failing, cattle dying and the situation is becoming so acute in the Dakotas that the Government is planning to put some of the farmers in direst need on relief and has turned them over to Soil Conservation to find means of employing them.

"We don't know when the rain will come, but we hope to get the farmers to work very shortly so that when it arrives we will have intelligent means of conserving the water," said an official of the Soil Conservation. The plan will be completed this week.

Overtime Checked.

Throughout the entire Government service, a record is being kept these days of overtime of employes. It started on July 1 as the first monthly report on the extra number of hours the regular employes work is due at the Civil Service Commission on July 31. This monthly tabulation will be kept until Congress meets in January, when the commission will make recommendations for laws covering the situation.

Claude Babcock, whose resignation as president of the American Federation of Government Employes, will be acted upon by national convention in Detroit in September, has opened private offices in the center of the city.

He is on leave of absence with pay from the federation until the matter of his resignation is decided and his new work is straightening out difficulties for Federal employes.

It's Personal Service.

"This is a personal service to Government employes and one for which I make very few charges," he said at his office the other day. "People with whom I have dealt for years come to me to straighten out their difficulties—perhaps trouble with their bosses, loss of jobs or desire to make transfers.

"I have found that most Government employes do not really know what the Civil Service act provides, and I merely interpret it for them and try to help them," he said.

Babcock was secretary to the Commission before taking the presidency of the federation.

"This is the same thing I have always done, but have just moved my headquarters," he said.

5-Day Week Sought.

Some good, hard summer spadework in the interest of Government employes has been begun by the National Federation of Federal Employes and is being directed from national headquarters in Washington. The entire country is being canvassed through its local units to sound out candidates on their stand on the measures for which the federation stands. Then, too, material for use at the beginning of the next Congressional session is being compiled, for the federation will try again to introduce bills which it unsuccessfully sponsored during the Seventy-fourth Congress.

One of the bills which the federation will push again is the one for a five-day working week for all Federal employes.

Praise Swamps F. B. I.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation which, by the way, puts out through its athletic association, one of the most complete publications of any Government department, says it is actually swamped these days with letters of congratulations on its work in cleaning up the country's public enemies.

The register of prominent visitors within the month sounds like a who's who. Among them have been Ricardo Cortez, John Boles and Paul Lukas, of the cinema world; Gene Buck, composer of the theatrical world; Joseph Hergesheimer, of literary fame, and a long list of diplomats and statesmen from foreign lands.

Chevy Chase Club Is Scene Of Gala Event

Members of D. C. Society Who Remained in City Hold Parties.

German Embassy Attache Is Host at Dinner on Saturday.

By Dudley Harmon.

Although Washington resembled a deserted village over the week-end, members of society who remained in the Capital celebrated the holiday undaunted by frequent showers which interfered with some of the fireworks.

Many gathered at Chevy Chase Club on Saturday evening for the gala dinner and fireworks display. Although the latter was interrupted by rain when it was only half over, guests went inside and spent the rest of the evening dancing.

The Naval Attache of the German Embassy, Rear Admiral Robert Witthoeft-Emden, entertained a small group at dinner at the club. Among his guests were the First Secretary of the Embassy, Herr Herbert Scholz, Mrs. Gerald Linke, wife of Lieut. Linke, who is on a tour of sea duty, and Mrs. Evatt Barnum.

Mrs. Jean de Sibour, daughter of the Minister of Austria and Mme. Prochnik, was at a table with her husband and a party of friends. Others who attended were Miss Florence Harris and Miss Diane Rowland, who were escorted by the First Secretary of the Czechoslovak Legation, Mr. Otakar Kabelac, and the Secretary of the Portuguese Legation, Mr. Joao de Deus Ramos. Miss Rowland and Miss Harris will leave Washington the first of August to spend several weeks at the former's home near Damariscotta, Me.

Earlier in the afternoon a small group gathered at the home of Mr. Donald Downs, on the Virginia shore of the Potomac, for an informal picnic. The picnic supper was followed by a fireworks display on the terrace overlooking the river.

Later in the evening several of the guests went on to the home of Mrs. W. D. Thomas, one of the largest and most historically interesting houses in Georgetown. The terraced garden which slopes down to the Potomac was illuminated by lights concealed in the trees which cast long shadows on the grass.

Mrs. Thomas will leave today for California, accompanied by Miss Phyllis Walsh, of New York and Philadelphia, who has been her guest. From California, Mrs. Thomas will sail for China, to join her husband, Commander Thomas, who is stationed there.

Among the guests at Mr. Downs' picnic, some of whom went on to Mrs. Thomas' home, were the Attache of the Rumanian Legation, Mr. Laurence Bungardeanu; Mrs. Bowler Hull, Mr. Edward Gardiner, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, Mrs. Pendleton Mayo, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Miller and Mr. and Mrs. W. Royce Powell, of Alexandria.

Miss Pickering And Mr. Avery To Be Married

Michigan Girl's Parents Announce Her Troth to Capital Man.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Pickering, jr., of Pleasant Ridge, Mich., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Anne Pickering, to Mr. Frederick Scott Avery, of Los Angeles, Calif., and Washington.

Miss Pickering attended Kingswood School, Bloomfield Hills, Mich., and Katharine Gibbs School.

Mr. Avery is the son of Dr. and Mrs. F. Scott Avery, of Washington. He recently received his LL. B. degree with high honors from the University of Southern California, where he was a member of the Chi Phi Fraternity. He passed the bar examination and expects to begin his parctice immediately.

The romance began five years ago when Miss Pickering, then but 15 years of age, visited her grandparents, former Gov. and Mrs. Richard Yates, at Washington.

The courtship continued although she and her fiancee did not meet again until this spring, when they both visited at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Avery, where they became engaged. Plans for the wedding are not yet complete.

Recently, on his way to California, Mr. Avery was a guest in the Pickering home in Pleasant Ridge. He accompanied his fiancee to Jacksonville, Ill., to visit Mrs. Pickering, who is spending the summer with her mother, Mrs. Richard Yates, who since the death of her husband has returned to her old home and her apartments at the Colonial Inn, Jacksonville. Miss Pickering has visited in this city several times at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Alpha B. Applebee.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Escavaille, jr., of 2230 California street, have returned from a trip to London and Paris. They will leave tomorrow by motor for California, the Canadian Rockies, and Maine, returning in September.

Washington Scene

By the Poe Sisters.

Washington's younger set received with interest the news of the engagement of Miss Patricia Donavin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kirkwood Donavin, of San Francisco, to Lieut. Seymour Dunlop Owens, U. S. N., a nephew of Mrs. Middleton Guest and Mrs. John Guest, of Washington.

The bride-elect is a niece of Capt. and Mrs. James Laurence Kauffman, well known in Army and Navy circles here. Lieut. Owens is the son of Dr. and Mrs. William Dunlop Owens, of Boston, and a graduate of the Naval Academy in the class of 1931. When he was at Annapolis and on a tour of duty in Washington after being graduated he attended many social affairs in the Capital. He is related to the Edward C. Parishes, of New York, and also to the Daingerfield family of Virginia.

Another popular bachelor well known in Washington who will join the ranks of benedicts before long is Mr. Thomas William Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Clark, of Philadelphia, who visits the Capital frequently during the season. Mr. Clark will marry Miss Anna Fisher, daughter of Lord and Lady Fisher, of Kilderstone, Thetford Hall, England, on August 10. Washingtonians who attended the marriage of his sister, Miss Mary Clark, to Mr. Nelson Aldrich Rockefeller several years ago will remember Mr. Thomas William Clark as one of the groomsmen on that occasion.

Still another Washington bachelor is to marry an out-of-town girl this summer. Invitations have been received here to the marriage on July 18 of Miss Anne Graeme Turnbull, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Clayland Turnbull, of Baltimore, and Mr. Marshall Duer McDorman, of Washington, son of Mrs. Frederick Stanley Groves and the late Mr. Alfred T. McDorman. The wedding will take place in Baltimore.

Nowadays persons who do not like the locations of their houses simply move them. Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris went even further when they moved their new home, The Lindens, from Danvers, Mass., where it had stood as a landmark since Revolutionary days, to Washington.

Now Mr. and Mrs. John Hurley, of Chicago, son and daughter-in-law of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hurley, prominent in Washington at the time of the World War, have moved their Chicago home from its first location, on Roosevelt road, in Wheaton, near Chicago, further back into the grounds in order to give them a better view of the lake.

Houses that have been moved about in Washington include the Girl Scout Little House, model of the home of John Howard Payne, author of "Home, Sweet Home," which was moved after the close of the Better Homes movement from its site across from the Treasury to its present location near the Corcoran Gallery of Art.

What good times one used to have in the great hall of the Edson Bradley house on Dupont Circle, every stone of which was brought over from a historic castle in England. When the Edson Bradley house was pulled down to make way for a more modern building, not only the great hall but the beautiful chapel was moved to the Newport home of the Edson Bradleys.

The famous peacock room in the Freer Gallery, decorated by Whistler, was moved intact to Washington from a London residence and set up here to be one of the city's choicest art treasures.

White House, the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick D. Richardson, in Fairfax, will be the scene of a swimming party in the near future, given in honor of Mr. Randolph Scott, motion-picture star, who is a cousin of Mrs. Richardson.

Mr. Scott, whose mother and sisters, the Misses Katherine and Barbara Scott, are now in Washington, will visit them soon and will also be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Richardson.

The Richardsons, whose daughter, Miss Randolph Richardson, is one of the popular sub-debutantes in the Capital, entertain nearly every week-end with informal swimming parties and buffet suppers at their home in Fairfax. Members of the younger set as well as older guests gather there on Saturdays and Sundays throughout the season and also at the adjoining estate of Mrs. Richardson's sister, Mrs. Robert Graham, and Mr. Graham. Yesterday and on the Fourth they entertained large groups, including Washingtonians and friends from neighboring places in Virginia.

There is a thrill of excitement among Miss Richardson's young friends over the arrival of her cousin from Hollywood, and the party at which he will be the honored guest, is one to which the young people are looking forward.

The Misses Scott and their mother leased their home in Charlottesville following their father's death a few months ago, and expect to locate in Washington or nearby Maryland or Virginia.

Among the young people who were guests of Miss Richardson at White House yesterday were Miss Yvonne Christian, Miss Clara Margaret Grantham, Miss Mary Senate Howes, Miss Laura Johnson, Miss Mary Kay Spinks, Miss Patricia Brewer, Miss Gail Koss, Mr. Sidney Smith, Mr. Earl Smith, Mr. John Sherman, Mr. Stewart Cureton, Mr. Roderick Kenner, Mr. Robert McCandlish, Mr. Edward Pierce, Mr. Tod Wimsatt and Mr. John Chappelear.

And Call It Accident

By Belloc Lowndes.

Chapter 25.

When they were in bed her husband said suddenly, "Do try and get that girl to give you a little money. It seems ages since you said you would, my pet."

"I'll do it tomorrow. How much shall I say I want?"

"You may as well be hung for a sheep as a lamb. How about a cool thou.?"

"A thousand pounds? That seems an awful lot Phil."

"A mere trifle to your dear young friend," he replied airily.

Ruth and Iris had their midday meal together alone. Philip had gone into Lilyford to see the builder. Lady Cicester had far too good a lawyer not to have everything adequately insured, and she had sent her nephew early that morning a letter bidding him find out the full value of the burned-out building.

Money Trouble.

Ruth had slept till midday, and now the fire seemed to have been an evil dream.

But Iris looked very ill. There were dark rings around her beautiful eyes, and she had a suffering, despondent expression on her face. They went into the setting room for coffee, and Ruth said affectionately, "Last night was too much for you. It was a shame, all those men coming in here and wanting something to eat!"

"The truth is, I'm a bit worried," said Iris, and her voice shook. God! How she hated the thing she was about to do.

"What's the trouble, dear? Is it anything about which I can help?"

"It's a money trouble. It seems always to be that with us." There was a bitter tang in her voice. It was terrible to carry out her husband's orders, for it had been no less.

"If it's about money, then surely I can help you out."

"You could help, of course. But I loathe letting you do it."

With astonishment and concern the American girl saw that the speaker's eyes were full of tears. It was the first time she had seen Iris crying.

"How much do you want?"

"It would take a thousand pounds to make me all right. I have got to find it somehow in the next week or fortnight, and Philip knows nothing about it."

"I'll give it to you at once."

On hearing those words Iris turned her face away and her whole body shook with sobs. And then she gasped out, "You're too kind—much too kind, Ruth. Sometimes it frightens me—it seems too much luck that we should have made such a splendid friend as you've turned out to be, to me as well as to Phil."

There was a note of great sincerity in her voice, and Ruth was moved to the core of her generous heart. She felt ashamed of having felt, as she had done of late, that the Trefanes only valued her for what they could make out of her.

In the life of every human being there are certain happy days which remain in the mind as having been, in a sense, flawless.

Such were the days that composed the week-end spent by Ruth Starling at the manor house during the visit of the American ambassador and the delightful young couple accompanying him who consisted of the councilor of the embassy and his clever, high-spirited wife. A British cabinet minister with a capricious, rather foolish wife, had "chucked" at the last moment, so the party was restricted in numbers. That, however, made for a certain cozy intimacy being quickly established among those who then met for the first time. And it was as if each of them, one and all, conspired together to pet and spoil the young actress in their midst.

Ruth had never met the type of American diplomat to which belonged the present American ambassador to the Court of St. James, and she was enchanted with his old-world courteous manners, and with the pleasure he evidently took in her company. She would have been surprised to know, in fact incredulous of the fact that he, on his side, had never met her particular kind of girl. Most of his grown-up life had been led in Europe, and so it amused and keenly interested this man who knew so much about every country in the world excepting his own, to meet a quite unknown and hitherto unrealized type of young American womanhood.

So it was that Ruth, with astonished pleasure, found herself what Victorians called "the belle of the hall." The local grandees who were asked to lunch and dinner much preferred her to the highly sophisticated, brilliant wife of the councilor; and again and again Lady Cicester said to her son: "I don't know what we should have done without our dear little Ruth. She has helped to make everything go well, while never pushing herself forward at all!"

The only shadow on those happy days was the fact, only all too well known to Ruth, that both Philip and Iris Trefane in their different ways were each bitterly indignant that they had not been included in the party staying actually in the house. But it evidently never occurred to Philip's aunt to ask them to more than lunch on the Sunday and to the concluding dinner party on the Tuesday night. Indeed, she thought herself very kind to have done as much as that, and she would not have done so had it not been that she knew Iris was a valuable addition to any social gathering because of her striking appearance.

The burning of the castle annex had aroused great interest in the neighborhood, and again and again the American girl was called upon to describe her miraculous escape. And on one of the few occasions when she and Lord John found themselves alone he said impulsively: "I do hate to hear people talking to you about that awful fire! Any one with an ounce of sense would know that you must shrink from being reminded of such an awful experience."

She had answered gayly: "I don't mind at all! It all seems so far away now, thanks to your mother's kindness in having asked me to come before the rest of the party arrived. I'm sorry for poor Helen Bates, for she hates having had to come back and live in the castle."

"I little thought I should ever live to thank God for the existence of Helen Bates!" he exclaimed. "But I've done so many a time since I knew that owing to her your life was saved."

"Owing to her, and also to Mr. Troutbeck," she answered. "If it hadn't been for that ladder he had put down there, I might easily have broken both my legs. Of course, I should have jumped out of the bathroom window, and nothing could have prevented my having an awful fall, for there are a lot of shingles and stones just there. Philip and Iris hadn't noticed that the window in the bathroom was different from those in the bedroom. If it hadn't been a French window I must have been burned to death."

Talks With Ambassador.

Ruth had another, and to her, far more interesting tete-a-tete on the last day of her visit to the manor house. Her ambassador, nothing loath, had been persuaded to stay till the afternoon before going on to another house some 40 miles away, and deliberately he sought out the company of his young countrywoman. And as Lady Cicester saw them walk off down a shady roadway she smiled with pleasure. Already she had made up her mind that when her son, John, and Ruth Starling married, the ambassador should give his delightful young countrywoman away. She would have been piqued, indeed considerably annoyed, had she heard how his excellency opened his conversation with the girl.

"I understand that you are going to have a theatrical season in London this fall? You must be sure and let me know the date of your opening, for, of course, I would like to take a box for your first night, Miss Starling."

"How marvelously kind of you!" And there came an expression of real delight over her sparkling countenance.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Emergencies of Childhood.

I.

Every youngster will suffer scores of bumps, sprains, scratches and bruises ere he grows up. Most of these will be harmless. It all depends on how sensibly and efficiently each injury is handled. Skilled attention at the right time is needed to insure safety.

Let us consider a few of the happennings that may occur. Perhaps enumerating them may lead to greater "safety consciousness" on the part of parents and older children.

It goes without saying that children should not be allowed to play with articles small enough to be swallowed, and we must remember that everything bright or colored is especially attractive. A button, a coin, a bead, or even pins may be carried to the mouth. As a rule small items can be placed beyond the reach of the youngster until the creeping and walking stages, when added precautions will be required.

Not Uncommon.

Burns and scalds are not uncommon, and this means that matches and hot or inflammable liquids should be out of range. Neither should a child be allowed to play about the kitchen where the handles of cooking utensils on top of the stove may be grasped.

Scratches are a real menace, as every child may tear the skin on some part of the body in even the most protected play. Regardless of its minor nature, every break in the skin should be washed thoroughly with soap and water, then covered with a piece of clean dry gauze held in place with a narrow band of adhesive plaster. Neglect this simple care and infection may follow.

Plant Bacteria.

Puncture wounds caused by nails, tacks or sharp bits of metal are likely to start trouble, because they can plant bacteria deep into the tissues. The tetanus organism that causes lockjaw abounds everywhere. We escape it by one method only, and that is cleanliness. Sometimes a nail injury does not bleed and hence is more dangerous. Tetanus bacteria will not grow if air has access to all the parts. The difficulty lies in the fact that deep, penetrating stabs close up as soon as the nail is withdrawn and cannot be kept open unless specal surgical procedures are employed. For this reason it is wise to administer tetanus antitoxin whenever an injury has been inflicted by a dirty object

Occasionally youngsters will faint, particularly on trips where the digestion has been upset because food is taken irregularly, or because of car-sickness, too much heat, dust, etc. About all that one needs to do is too see that the child is placed in the shade in a prone position. It may be well to have the head lower than the body, which will cause an increased flow of blood to the brain, bringing a return of consciousness.

In many diseases a high temperature will often develop suddenly, and if it is not controlled within a reasonable time, convulsions may result. A warm mustard bath is the quickest and best remedy until the doctor comes.

Lovely complement for summer frocks, this lacy pair requires but a bit of simple crochet—just a small, open mesh for the hands, cuffs in larger mesh with the handsome flower design as the only decoration. Crochet cotton, in pastel shades, will make so lovely a pair, it won't be long before you're starting another!

In pattern 5654 you will find complete instructions for making the gloves shown in a small, medium and large size (all given in one pattern); illustrations of the gloves and of all stitches needed; material requirements.

Simplicity Keynote Of German Clothes

Paris (AP).—German fashions are making a bid for attention with the approach of the eleventh Olympic games at Berlin early in August.

Simplicity is the keynote of their design—clean-cut sports clothes and simple street costumes of plain and angora wools, printed silks and crinkled crepes being the most popular models.

The five multicolored, interlinked Olympic rings (international symbol of the games) are occasionally used as embroidered motifs. One summer sports suit combines a dark blue jacket and white skirt of rough silk and is finished with a white tuck-in scarf embroidered with the five Olympic rings.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

The Diet Girls.

"That fried chicken sounds good . . . still, I suppose I ought to take the vegetable plate——"

"I simply can't take anything but beet juice . . . Dr. Bilk says I'll lose 10 pounds easy in two weeks if I stay on absolutely nothing but beet juice."

"Well, this Prof. Jigg has a perfectly wonderful system . . . I can have anything I want except meats and starches and sweets and fats, and, of course, I can't have any milk, eggs, or butter, fruits or root vegetables, or——"

"That's like Marie Bunch. She can have absolutely all she can eat of popcorn and Gefilta fish. Oh yes, and she can have Bermuda onions . . . all she can eat of Bermuda onions."

"This Prof. Jigg is simply marvelous. He says I'm really not overweight at all . . . it's just that it's in the wrong places."

"That's the way with me. I'm not really the stout type. As far as that's concerned, none of the Chubbs' are actually fat."

"Did you see those measurements of Miss America in the paper? I was checking up on them, and do you know mine are almost exactly the same * * * except for the ankles and waistline, and I'm a little heavier in the shoulders—say we really must order * * *"

"I'm not taking anything but beet juice * * * a double order of beet juice, please * * * and say you might bring me some buttered toast to go with it * * * and maybe some stuffed celery * * * and I don't believe it would hurt to take some of that asparagus Hollandaise."

"I'll take some chicken a la King * * * I wouldn't call chicken 'meat,' would you?"

"Of course not! Chicken's 'fowl.'"

". . . And I'll take some fruit salad with whipped cream . . . you really can't call whipped cream 'milk' . . . anyway I think you ought to start sort of gradually on a diet."

"So do I. Look at Jane Tripp. She looks like a witch . . . "

"Oh, that reminds me! Have you heard about Stella Oxley? She's taken up the Woof-Woof system . . . a Mme. Blitz has it. All you have to do, this Mme. Blitz says, is to live naturally. You can have nuts and fruit . . . oh yes, and you can have all the raw meat you want . . . and twice a day for an hour you have to walk outdoors on all fours. It's terribly embarassing, Stella says, the way people come and stare at her when's she's out in the yard . . . "

"Grace Flitter's trying a system that sounds perfectly grand. A Dr. Ojikugi . . . he's a Yogi or a Swami or something like that . . . has it, and he says fat's all in the mind. All you have to do is to concentrate four hours a day——"

"Betty Waddle has a wonderful system . . . some big doctor from Vienna brought it over. He says it's all in eating light meals . . . Betty eats 16 times a day——"

"It was time Betty was doing something . . . it's a wonder she ever held Jim. You know I always say a woman's figure counts a lot more than her face . . . you can always hide your face . . . that is more or less."

"Let me tell you something—you're just as old as your figure—say, are you taking any dessert?"

"No, I'm sticking to beet juice . . . I really mean business this time . . . No, no, nothing else . . . just another order of beet juice."

"I guess I ought to take some stewed prunes—say I wish you'd look at that strawberry shortcake . . . you know I don't believe that would hurt anybody . . . after all, strawberry shortcake's not really a sweet . . . that is, it's got fruit in it. . . "

"I wonder if a bite of it would hurt me . . . if I took some beet juice with it . . . "

Say, why don't you take it . . . just this one time . . . after all you really have to eat something to keep up your strength. . . "

"Well, I guess a person's entitled to a little pleasure . . . besides I wouldn't have to eat it all. . . "

"Go on and take it! I will if you will!"

"All right . . . but do you know what I'm going to do tomorrow? I'm going to start and really follow my diet!

"So am I. Two strawberry shortcakes, please."

Thin Grosgrain Ribbon For Crepe Print Dress

Paris (AP).—A new trimming for a printed crepe dress consisted of four grosgrain ribbons only a quarter of an inch wide, repeating the colors o fthe print. In purple, yellow, white and blue, they joined together to make a narrow band collar closing in back. From there their ends fell free in eight narrow streamers to the waist.

Doors of Autos Offer Menace For Children

People Forever Getting Their Fingers Crushed and Broken in Machines.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

One of the small but very real and ever-present dangers of automobiles is the car door. People are forever getting their fingers broken and crushed by inadvertently slamming the car door on them. With tiny children the results may easily be very serious, and it is the tiny children who are most apt to be caught.

It is hard to keep track of a very little child's hands. They have such an aimless way of fluttering about. The mother must watch them every minute if she is to keep them out of harm's way.

She climbs into the car, settles the baby beside her, and perhaps opens the door on the baby's side to be sure that it is tightly closed before they start. It may be that just at the moment she is swinging the door to, the baby puts out his hand.

Parents must first train themselves. They must, before touching the car door, find out where the baby's hands are and hold them in the baby's lap. If they make a habit of this, and hold them always in the same way, the baby will gradually, as a result of the association of ideas, put his hands in his lap when anyone touches the car door.

The training should be begun when a child is 6 months old and still has to be held in someone's arms. By the time he can sit up alone, the mother can begin to call his attention to the need for folded hands when the door is open. The normal condition for a car door to be in is closed. Anything else requires special precautions.

Pleasant HOMES

"I'M HINTING for some new furniture . . . I'm sure I'll get it if I lead up to it gradually enough. So I want to have everything planned out smartly by the time I can actually do the buying."

Her husband is one of those men who always acts rather gruff and indifferent, but he'd get her the moon all tied up in a blue ribbon package if she really took a notion to it. But he likes to be begged! And she doesn't mind a bit.

She's planning to get rid of some of her living room furniture. She'll keep the better pieces—a wing chair, a walnut secretary, two rather nice Queen Anne end tables. But she wants a new sofa, two new easy chairs and a new rug. And of course the walls wil lhave to be done over to go with all those refreshments, and she'll make new draperies and curtains.

The living room is a big sunny room—rather long in shap—with sunlight from three sides. She's going to have the walls painted powder blue and get a deeper dusty blue carpet for the floor. And she's almost sure she's going to have the new sofa in flame colored damask . . . and maybe one other chair in that too. Then she wants chintz for the windows—awhite ground with flashes of flame color in the flower pattern. These will be lined and weighted and hung straight from to the floor from wooden moulding cornices painted powder blue. One chair will be in yellow upholstery and two other chairs in a linene that is patterned with ever so many different colorings and harmonious in this room. The lamps wit will be in white and yellow. She will add a wide low coffee table and several extra occosional tables—all of walnut in Queen Anne design. And whenever she can she will keep yellow flowers in crystal bowls.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Is Perplexed by Family's Disapproving Attitude When She Goes Out With Fiance.

DEAR MARY HAYWORTH: I have a very perplexing problem and would like your advice. I am a girl stenographer 22 years old and have been going with a man of 26 for nearly a year. He lives in another city. While ours was a case of love at first sight, we have become steadily more attached to each other. I can truthfully say I have never known anyone I thought so much of.

He has said he wants to marry me, but he and I both agree that we are not financially able to marry now. His idea, with which I agree, is to save so that we can have a home when we marry. My whole family likes him very much, but my problem is this: My parents are peculiar in that they don't seem to realize times have changed and that young people who are going together want to get out and go places. They disapprove of my going out of nights and think my friend and I should stay at home and just talk. Young people of today don't want such. What am I to do?

* * * *

When this young man comes to see me, we always go out some where, but when we get home everybody has a long face and wants to know where we have been. I have a sister just 23 who has always been allowed the privilege of going places and having a good time and what I can't understand is the discrimination against me.

* * * *

I go to church and am very active in church work. I sing and play in church, and that is all right with my family, but if I go anywhere else I am sure to get my feelings hurt after I get home. I realize one is never too old to profit by advice, but don't you think the family is being a little too strict on me? I take everything and never talk back because I have always wanted to be sweet and loveable with everyone, but don't you think I am right in this case? I know I would be happy if married to this man. But please give me your advice on what to do about this problem. I only have opportunity to read The Post a few days each week and would appreciate it if you will answer as near the first of the week as possible.

DOWNHEARTED.

Discover the Reason.

DEAR DOWNHEARTED: Offhand and judging from the one-sided testimony you give, it would seem that your family's attitude is unnecessarily strict and officious. However, not knowing what their real reasons are for objecting to your going out with your fiance, I cannot say definitely whether or not they are justified in taking the attitude you say they have adopted. It may be they feel that your youth, your ardent devotion to this man, and the prospect of a long engagement is a combination more dangerous than you realize; that prolonged and unchaperoned association with him may provoke an indiscreet expression of that love. That may be why they feel happiest and most content when his visits are conducted under the parental roof. It may be, too, that secretly they disapprove of the young man, but have not ventured to tell you so; believing that opposition would only add fuel to the flames of your mutual devotion and believing that seeming approval will be the best method of promoting a waning of the attraction. I cannot believe they would, for no good reason, permit your sister social privileges which they would seek to deny you.

* * * *

As for what to do, the only thing I can suggest is a continuance of your present program: namely, going out with the young man when he comes, and listening sweetly and silently to your family's reproaches for so doing, without permitting their actions and reproaches to upset you too much. Have you tried asking your family bluntly just why they object to your doing what they permit your elder sister to do? I would suggest you put the question either to your sister or to your mother.

* * * *

It is always doubtful wisdom for a third person who doesn't know the full picture to counsel a young girl to rebel against parental restrictions. Unless one has positive proof to the contrary, one must take for granted that the average family is generously concerned with guaranteeing the happiness of its youthful members. And positive proof has not been offered here that your family is seeking maliciously to restrain your comings and goings for no sound reason. It seems to me it is up to you to find out just what their reasons are. You have admitted, you know, that you "can't understand the discrimination" against you. M. H.

Job for "Yankee."

NOTE TO HOMESICK YANKEE: On July 3 I published your letter in this column in which you said (telling about your difficulty in finding permanent employment in the business world): "There must be somethin gin my voice or personality which antagonizes—but how can I tell what it is." In my reply, I suggested you make an appointment with me for a personal interview, thinking that would be the best method of getting at the root of your difficulty.

* * * *

As a result of the publication of your letter here, I have had a telephone call from a Washington attorney, himself a Yankee, who is willing to give you a try-out for a permanent place as secretary in his office. But how am I to get in touch with you if you don't call me and give me your name and address?

* * * *

Perhaps your whole difficulty is lack of initiative. It begins to look like it. Please get in touch with me at once, if you hope to avail yourself of this attorney's offer. The place must be filled by Saturday, July 11, so you have no time to lose. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Philippines Are Puzzled By Freedom

Missionary Points Out Concern Mixed With Natural Elation.

Change of Attitude Is Due to Militaristic Japanese Stand.

The Filipinos are as much concefned as elated with the independence they have just won from the United States, the Rev. Albert Sanders, recently returned from missionary duty on the islands, declared on a visit here yesterday.

Coming to the Capital to be guest preacher at Sunday services in New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, Sanders brought here the account of a change of heart in the Filipino.

"The natives have their independence, so they are no longer anti-American—as I found they were when I reached the Philippine Islands nine years ago," the missionary pointed out.

"But the independence they wanted—now that it's in their hands—isn't the toy they thought it to be."

The Filipino eyes Japan's militaristic advances with alarm. He also fears disorders.

"He isn't exactly pessimistic over the ability of his young government to meet whatever problems arise, but he views the dangers with alarm.

"The Filipinos are capable people in many respect, and, of course, no one knows how unforeseen events will affect the situation—but I left the Philippine Islands (at last Christmas time) feeling the cards are stacked against them," said Sanders.

Although everyone believes, the missionary revealed, that Japan has "its hands full for years to come" with China, they are almost certain that the Japanese will sooner or later want the Philippines.

"And they'd have an easier time taking the islands than Italy had getting Ethiopia. The Philippines haven't the natural barriers."

Sparse Population.

Sanders said the 7,000 islands in the country would give Japan much needed agricultural land. Only 12 per cent of the available farming country is now under cultivation. And the nation is sparsely populated compared with crowded conditions in Japan—13,000,000 people inhabit a country that is larger than the territory of New England.

Japan, however, isn't the young nation's only worry. Internal disorders, so frequently the plague of new governments, are feared, and, according to Sanders, there are those groups and sections that distrust the administration of President Manuel Quezon, who took office last fall.

Trade is another problem.

Under America's wing, the Philippines have enjoyed free access to American markets. Such will no longer be the case when the United States withdraws completely from the picture.

"The Filipinos must compete with other countries then, and find new markets. It remains to be seen how successful they will be," said Sanders.

Already the Japanese are entering the commercial field in the Philippines. In the last year or so businessmen from Tokyo have come into Manila and started commercial enterprises. Until recently the Chinese have had control of most of the islands' commerce. Sanders expects that situation to change in favor of Japan in the next few years.

Have Responsibility.

To meet the problems that may become crises in the nation's future the citizens of the land have two principal qualifications: they know "the art of self-government," and they can take responsibility in routine matters.

"I think no people ever learned the art of self-government so quickly as did the Filipinos," said Sanders. "In the few decades of American tutorship they have grasped the principles remarkably well. They have accepted duties and responsibilities. They have done much to prepare for independence.

"Then they are excellent in routine affairs. They are especially good when it comes to running a department like the postoffice."

Sanders added that the Philippine government has ten years to develop under the protection of the United States. Japan, he thought, would not bother the country while the United States is still there.

Sanders went to the Philippines as a representative of the Presbyterian denomination in 1927. He had just graduated from Princeton Seminary and took with him his young bride, the former Miss Edna Farnham, who before her marriage was a teacher in Gallaudet College in Washington.

The couple are spending the summer in the Berkshire Mountains in Massachusetts. Mr. Sanders plans to enter the ministry somewhere in the United States.

D. C. Among First For Charity Gifts

Washington was listed yesterday among six large American cities which, during the first half of 1936, increased their gifts to charity over those of 1935.

The compilation, made by the John Price Jones Corporation, showed that the six cities this year announced gifts totaling $33,798,477. Last year they announced $28,133,228 in gifts. The cities are Washington, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Boston.

Last year Washington announced $308,901 in philanthropic contributions. The sum for the first six months this year is $2,092,813.

The largest increase in contributions in any classification was for organized relief. Gifts totalling $15,909,878 were made for organized relief during the six months this year, compared with $7,936,260 in 1935. This increase is due in part to funds raised for flood relief.

Teachers' Pay Controversy Up Tomorrow

Settlement of Vocational School Scale Likely if Quorum Attends.

Ballou, Instructor Group Expected to Appear for Hearing.

Teachers in Washington vocational schools, recently raised by Congress from elementary to junior high school status, may learn tomorrow if their salaries will be raised to junior high level when school is resumed next September.

The Board of Education's special committee on vocational education has called a meeting to discuss the matter tomorrow at 11:45 a. m. If a quorum of the board's full membership attends, the question will be settled in another meeting immediately afterward.

Henry Gilligan, chairman of the special committee, who has conducted several hearings before his committee, said yesterday he expects to air once more differences between Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, and teachers representing the 86 instructors in the District's five vocational public schools.

Teachers Invited.

Gilligan has invited E. J. Murphy, president of the Vocational Association, teachers' organization, to appear at the meeting with a delegation of teachers. He said he also expected Dr. Ballou to be present to support his contention that the act of Congress does not provide for automatic salary raises from the elementary to the junior high level.

He has urged the board to adopt the policy that only those teachers who can qualify as junior high school teachers are entitled to the raise in salary status.

Murphy, on the other hand, has asked the school trustees to overlook certain academic qualifications required of junior high teachers in favor of trade experience.

The board must either decide between the two views or draw up its own standard to which the vocational teachers must measure to qualify for the salary increase.

Four Points of Ballou.

Dr. Ballou has proposed these four specifications as the standard: (1) basic education equipment of at least a high school education; (2) additional educational preparation weighted according to how recently it was completed and the relation it bears to the character of work the teacher is appointed to do; (3) teaching experience in vocational schools and experience in practical trade work beyond apprenticeship in excess of the requirement for original qualification for the position, and (4) official efficiency ratings during the last five years.

Murphy stated his views in a recent appearance before Gilligan's committee.

"It has always been the policy of the schools over a long period of time automatically to place in a new salary scale those already doing the work for which a new salary is provided," Murphy said.

"We ask that as a matter of justice those who through a period of years have served and developed these schools be given the benefits of the act whether they be vocational or academic teachers."

Cites Trade Experience.

Trade experience, Murphy also has pointed out, is an education in itself "which should be valued parallel to academic work." These experiences, he added, should be considered and recognized in entitling the satisfactory teacher to automatic placement under the new bill.

Teachers raised from an elementary to a junior high status will enter a new salary bracket that will mean from $200 to $600 more a year to them. Elementary school salaries begin at a $1,400-a-year minimum and rise to a $2,200 maximum. Junior high salaries begin at $1,600 and climb to 2,800, the latter for those with master's degrees.

In addition to Gilligan, the special vocational education committee membership includes George Whitwell and John Wilson. At least five of the board's nine members must attend the meeting at which the committee submits its report to authorize action.

Several members of the board have left the city for the summer and Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, president of the board, said she expected to be away tomorrow. However, Gilligan said he believed "at least five members" would be present.

Physician in Safety Contest

DR. CHARLES E. FERGUSON.

Doctor, Safe Driver Since '99, Entered in Contest by Patient

Local Physician Boasts 400,000-Mile Record of Not Receiving a Ticket or Having an Accident.

Back in the days of "one-lung" horseless carriages—when the only traffic problem was to keep an auto going once it was started—Dr. Charles E. Ferguson purchased his first engine-driven buggy.

It was an Oldsmobile, the first car of its type in Washington, and Dr. Ferguson was the center of attraction wherever he chugged to a stop.

That was back in 1899. Yesterday, Dr. Ferguson, who lives at 1414 Delafield place northwest, recalled many harrowing experiences during those early days of motor transportation.

But since that time, he estimates he has driven at least 400,000 miles—without an accident or even a parking ticket. On the basis of this record, one of Dr. Ferguson's patients sent his name to C. I. T. Safety Foundation—American Automobile Association "safe driver" contest.

Dr. Ferguson, however, didn't know he was a candidate to represent the District in a Nation-wide safety motorcade to New York August 31.

"I didn't know my name had been submitted until some one told me about it," he said.

But he admitted his traffic record was untarnished. Since that first motor driven carriage, Dr. Ferguson has owned 15 automobiles. He drives an average of 1,000 miles a month and never once has scraped a fender.

He drove four years before the District adopted a law requiring drivers to obtain permits. He was one of the first to apply for a permit and he still has his original license—number 4.

Soon after Dr. Ferguson purchased his first car, he sought to build a shelter to protect it from the weather. Garages were unheard of. So the District building inspector issued him a permit to construct a woodshed. And this became Washington's first garage.

Dr. Ferguson's wife was the first woman in the city to obtain a driver's permit. She also has driven many miles without a serious mishap.

During his 37 years of driving—including extensive tours of the country—Dr. Ferguson has learned to avoid trouble by one simple rule:

"Remember you are driving an auto and don't think about other things while you are behind the wheel," he contends.

Carelessness is the major cause of accidents, he said. No matter how long a person has been driving, the chance of mishap is ever present unless the driver keeps his or her mind alert, Dr. Ferguson believes.

As a physician, Dr. Ferguson has treated many accident victims and knows the penalty of recklessness and high speeds.

If he is selected to represent Washington in the safe driver motorcade to New York, Dr. Ferguson will attend an "accident clinic" with other safe drivers selected from the 48 States. The winners' expenses will be paid by the C. I. T. foundation and the A. A. A. Entries will close July 15.

D. C. Democrats Open Campaign On Wednesday

With a preliminary meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee at the Harrington Hotel Wednesday, local Democrats this week will begin their campaign for re-election of President Roosevelt.

John B. Colpoys, chairman of the committee, said the initial meeting would be for an informal discussion of plans. Malcolm S. McConihe, new national committeeman, and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, national committeewoman, have been invited to attend.

Colpoys said another meeting would be held later at which all Democratic clubs would be asked to participate and to co-ordinate their campaign work to avoid duplication.

Active campaigning will not be begun until after Labor Day, Colpoys said. The chief function of the committee will be to furnish information to absentee voters.

The State central committee will designate Commissioner Allen to attempt to get Democratic organizations in the State to support Washington's petition to Congress for national representation in the Senate and House and for the right to vote in Presidential elections.

CCC Advisers In Education Meet Today

Fechner, Barney, Byrd on Opening Program at College Park.

Corps' Work Exhibition, Many Social Affairs to Feature Week.

Robert Fechner, director of Emergency Conservation Work; Col. J. P. Barney, corps area officer for CCC affairs, and Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, will speak at the opening of the second annual training conference of CCC educational advisers from the Third Corps Area in the auditorium of the agricultural building at the University of Maryland today at 7 p. m.

More than 150 advisers from the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania were arriving at College Park today for the two and a half week session which will close with a dinner dance July 22.

In recognition of work done by advisers in CCC camps the usual weekly education in the news program broadcast over the NBC red network Mondays at 6:45 p. m. will be devoted tonight to "Progress in CCC Education."

The first lecture and panel discussion will be held tomorrow at 8:30 a. m., with Dr. Arthur J. Jones, professor of secondary education, University of Pennsylvania, presiding in the study of guidance principles and techniques.

Charles H. Taylor, assistant director of Emergency Conservation Work, will be luncheon guest of the advisers tomorrow.

Attendance at the conference for special training for the unique type of education for the 35,000 enrollees in CCC camps in this corps area is voluntary, with all advisers meeting their own expenses for the period.

The conference is in the form of post-graduate educational work, as all advisers are college graduates with considerable experience in the teaching profession.

A well-planned educational exhibit presenting work from the various camps with nearly 2,000 entries is being arranged in the Ritchie Coliseum and will be open to the public from Friday until the conference closes. Visiting hours will be from 3:15 until 5 p. m. and from 7 until 9:30 p. m.

During their stay at the university the advisers will be entertained at a picnic supper, stunt night, Potomac excursion and a dinner dance on the closing night.

Lights Always Green Start Traffic Snarl

Some motorists driving in the section from New York avenue to L street and from Thirteenth to Fifteenth streets last night thought a kindly Deity was rewarding them for their virtues. They got green lights every time.

Others, caught by a red light that never changed, decided their sins had caught up with them at last.

But it was switch trouble that was at the root of the matter.

A near-serious traffic situation was caused as perplexed and impatient motorists, finally deciding to disregard the red warning signal, attempted to pass intersections against a stream of traffic that never ceased.

Several crashes were averted narrowly before six motorcycle patrolmen managed to restore order. A "trouble shooter" got the lights in working order after about an hour.

Doctors at the hospital said the girl was in serious condition with undetermined head injuries.

DeShong Is Star as Nats Riddle Yankees, 9 to 3, in Comeback

Hurler Gives 8 Hits; Mates Collect 11

13,000 See Game; Nats Clinch Game With 5 Runs in Third.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Those Fourth of July duds—the Nats—exploded, sparkled and crackled all over the place yesterday and won a ball game from the league-leading Yankees.

They riddled the New York pitchers with 11 hits, sent 5 runs clattering across the plate in the third inning, rose up in the field to knock down all varieties of well-tagged balls and produced in Jimmy DeShong a pitcher who muzzled the Yanks' attack.

They won the ball game, 9 to 3, before 13,000 of the faithful who were the remnants of that 38,000 who saw 'em take two lickings from the Yanks on Independence Day.

Yanks Helpless.

DiMaggio, Gehring, Lazzeri — the mighty trio of the holiday slaughter of the Nats—were helpless before the pitching of DeShong, whom the Yankees painfully recall discarding in the trading last Winter. The carrot-topped right-hander held that little group hitless in parcelling out only 8 hits to the Yanks.

Lazzeri also lost a decision to Umpire in Chief Lou Kolls. After squawking loudly on a play at second base in the fifth inning, Lazzeri upbraided Kolls for his decision on a two-base hit by Kress that shaved the foul line. Kolls listened and then, with some heat, thumbed Lazzeri out of the ball game. At that Lazzeri kicked up the dust at home plate and Kolls kicked it back at him.

That setback for the Yankees served to reduce their lead over the second-place Tigers to ten games. Washington remained in fourth place, a game and a half out of second.

DeShong Is Star.

That uproarious third-inning uprising of the Nats against Charley Ruffing snapped at seven the consecutive-game winning streak of the Yankee right-hander. Ruffing left the ball game under the press of circumstances in the third.

DeShong was no draw-back, either, up there at the plate. He accumulated three hits for himself and it was his single that launched the Nats on their large third inning.

George Selkirk, out in leftfield, encouraged the Nats to take a 1-0 lead in the second inning when he dropped Kress' fly for a two-base error. Bolton promptly scored Kress with a single to left.

Bolton Gets Triple.

Kress had drawn down a thunderous applause earlier in the inning when he went far to his right on a hard-hit ball by Selkirk, scooped it up with his glaved hand and while still off-balance rifled the ball to Bluege for a force play at second. It was Griffith Stadium's most sensational fieding feat of the season.

Ten Nats went to bat in the third. With one out, DeShong smacked a single to center, Chapman singled to left and so did Lewis. But those three consecutive hits only filled the bases. Kuhel emptied 'em of two runners with a single to center, Stone struck out, and Travis drove in the third run with a single to center.

At this point Cliff Bolton made it a big inning with a terrific triple off the rightfield fence that scored Kuhel and Travis.

Against big Ted Kleinhans the Nats made it 9-1 in the fifth. After Stone and Travis drew walks, Kres bashed his disputed double to right to score 'em both and followed them across the plate when DeShong singled cleanly to right center.

Jake Makes Second—But Bluege Throws the Batter Out

Jake Powell is pictured safe at second base in the fifth inning yesterday after his dash from first on Lazzeri's grounder to Bluege. The Nats' second baseman chose to make the play at first base and is seen getting the ball away to Joe Kuhel.

Browns Routed by 18-to-9 Score; Detroit Gets 26 Safeties.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 5.—The Detroit Tigers gained immediate revenge today for the defeat yesterday that ended their eight-game winning streak by romping through five Brownie pitchers for 26 hits that included four homers and produced an 18-9 victory.

Charley Gehringer started the four-bagger barrage in the first with two on base. Simmons, Rogell and Walker added the others.

Eight runs in the Detroit second iced the game for Tommy Bridges, although the right-hander retired after the fifth. Fourteen Tigers batted in the big inning and nine hit safely. Caldwell was charged with the defeat.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

The wishes of the 2,000,000 fans who cast their ballots and named the personnel of the American and National League All-Star teams will be strictly observed by Joe McCarthy, the Yankees' manager, who has been designated pilot of the American League entry at Boston tomorrow.

In Washington with his Yankees over the week-end, McCarthy declared that he considered it his duty to follow as closely as possible, without resorting to his five own choices at large, the American League line-up that was dictated by the Nation's fans.

POVICH.

"This is the fans' ball game, and unless emergencies arise, I want it to be played by the fans' team," McCarthy told his interviewers. "There are positions in which I think I could have a better choice, but the game isn't going to be played that way. I'm willing to take my chances with the players the fans have given me."

Thus McCarthy places his duty to the fans before his duty to the league. It is an undisguised fact that both leagues are hotly intent on winning the All-Star game as a matter of prestige, and in charging McCarthy with the management of the American League club, American League officials expect him to produce a victory.

In previous All-Star games Managers Connie Mack, Joe Cronin and Mickey Cochrane chose to place on the field their strongest line-ups without regard to the fans' selections, but McCarthy, apparently, regards the game in a different light. And it is to his credit that he is willing to take his chances of victory with the fans' selections.

Chief among the revelations made by McCarthy during his stay in Washington was his intention to keep Jimmy Foxx off third base, despite the fact that Foxx has played at third in every previous All-Star engagements.

"The fans chose Pinkey Higgins, of the Athletics, as the American League third baseman," said McCarthy, "and it's going to be Higgins on third base, despite the fact that Foxx is outhitting him by 60 points, or more. Anyway, I agree with the fans in their choice. Jimmy Foxx, for all his slugging, is not a third baseman and couldn't play third on my team."

But Jimmy Foxx is, unquestionably, a great first baseman, and inasmuch as the fans have chosen him along with Lou Gehrig for that post, McCarthy is going to introduce a new departure in the All-Star games and play Foxx at first base. Gehrig has played throughout the previous All-Star games at first, but McCarthy on Tuesday will relieve Gehrig with Foxx in the late innings in order to subscribe to the fans' wishes in the matter.

McCarthy's pitching problems, if any, were solved in a measure yesterday when Tommy Bridges and Mel Harder, two of his hurlers, took part in games for the Tigers and the Indians, respectively. Thus they will be hardly ready for an effort on Tuesday.

In further pursuance of the fans' desires, McCarthy promises that Lefty Grove and Schoolboy Rowe, who drew the bulk of the votes for pitchers, will pitch at least three innings each. He intimated that Monte Pearson would also be given a three-inning assignment.

In only one phase of the fans' voting did McCarthy violently disagree, he said, and that was the omission of Goose Goslin from the team. He will play Goslin in the line-up at some stage of the game, he declared, despite the fans' balloting. But Goslin's, he said, would probably be the only exception.

On Tuesday morning, McCarthy will confer with coaches and managers of other American League teams in Boston for the game. The purpose of that meeting will be to devise a system of signals and decide upon the batting order of his All-Star talent, which, according to McCarthy, constitutes his greatest problem.

Poverty Started Varoff on Path To Setting Pole-Vault Record

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, July 5.—World's Champion Peter Varoff took up pole vaulting in high school because tennis shoes were cheaper than track spikes.

Acquaintances said today his meager circumstances started him on the path that yesterday led over a 14-foot 6½-inch bar to a world's record. He set the record in the National A. A. U. senior championships at Princeton to become America's leading contender for the Olympics event.

Son of a Russian family, Varoff worked as a janitor prior to the regional Olympic trials in Los Angeles. Relatives said he quit the job to compete for the San Francisco Olympic Club.

Ben Eastman, world's record holder for the 440 and 880-yard races, and another former Stanford athlete whose identity was not disclosed put up part of the money for Varoff to go East.

Members of Varoff's family were elated but said they had not heard from him since his record performance.

Martha Worst, who won the javelin throw at the women's Olympic tryouts yesterday in Providence, paid for her trip East from her earnings as a San Francisco stenographer.

The victory will assure her a trip to Berlin.

Stanislaus Zbyszko's Taxes Are in Arrears

Buenos Aires, July 5 (AP).—Stanislaus Zbyszko, the aged Polish wrestler who announced his retirement more than 15 years ago, but is still plying his trade on Argentine mats, was informed today that the proceeds from his future matches will be seized by the government.

The income tax department, alleging that Zbyszko owes it 1,780 pesos—equivalent to about $470—obtained a court order permitting confiscation of his purses.

Red Sox Swamp Macks Twice, 16-2, 8-2

19,000 Watch as A's Losing Streak Is Extended to 12 Straight.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 5.—An 11-run inning and some heavy slugging by the Red Sox delighted a crowd of 19,000 as Boston trounced Philadelphia today in a double bill for the second time in two days. The scores were 16 to 2 and 8 to 2.

The Athletics have lost 12 games in a row. Wes Ferrell of the Sox had an easy time in the first game, winning his eleventh of the season while Jim Henry coasted along in the second.

The 11-run uprising came in the second frame of the opening game. Johnny Kroner drove in five runs with a homer and two singles while Bill Werber accounted for three runs with a homer with two men on base. The runs were scored off Pitchers Pete Naktenis and Randell

Olympic Crew Trial Won by Huskies

Whirlwind Finish Takes Then From Last to First Place.

Princeton, N. J., July 5.—The stalwart Huskies from the University of Washington rowed to a spectacular triumph in the final Olympic tryouts on the calm waters of Lake Carnegie today and won the right to represent the United States in the eight-oared event at Berlin.

Almost duplicating the whirlwind finish which brought them the intercollegiate championship at Poughkeepsie, the Huskies came from last place at the half-way mark today to win the 2,000-meter race by one length and a few feet of open water from the University of Pennsylvania.

California, which was expected to give Washington a rousing battle, finished third, a half length behind Penn. New York A. C., with several members of the crew slumped over in semicollapse, came in fourth and last, two and a half lengths behind California.

Washington's time for the 2,000 meters (13 yards short of a mile and a quarter) was 6 minutes 4 4-5 seconds, only 1 3-5 of a second off the Olympic record of 6:03 1-5 made by California in winning the world's title at Amsterdam in 1928. Penn's time was 6:08 3-5. No time was taken on California and New York A. C.

After the race Al Ulbrickson, coach of the unbeaten Washington crew, said the Huskies' time was six seconds faster than they had ever rowed in a time trial.

"Greatest Ever."

"It was a great race and I am proud to be coach of any outfit which refuses to be licked," he said. "I hate to go back on my pals who rowed in the 1926 boat which I stroked but I believe this crew is the greatest outfit that ever rowed for Washington."

With the cheers of an estimated crowd of 10,000 which lined the banks of Lake Carnegie ringing in their ears, the Huskies crossed the finish line fresh and pulling away from a nearly exhausted Penn crew, which had led for almost a mile.

The Huskies got away slowly, rowing at a beat of 39 strokes a minute during the first minute. When the crew settled down to the pace after the start, Penn was out in front; New York A. C., second; California, third, and Washington, last.

Penn Leads at Quarter.

At the quarter-mile it was Penn by half a length; New York A. C., second; California, third, and Washington, fourth. At the half-mile there was no change in the standings. Passing the 1,000-meter mark, Bobby Moch, Phi Beta Kappa coxswain, barked orders to Donald Hume, the powerful stroke oar in the Washington boat, to step up the beat. The Huskies had been rowing a beat of 35½. Hume increased the beat to 37. The Husky Clipper shot forward with each powerful pull of the mighty sons of the Far Northwest.

In 100 yards the Washington boat caught and passed California, and in a few more sweeps of their white-tipped oars drew even with the fast-tiring New York A. C., boatload. Approaching the mile mark, Penn still held its lead but Washington, now rowing almost 40 strokes a minute, was gradually overtaking the Eastern boat. New York A. C had dropped behind and California had moved into third place, gaining ground on Penn but losing distance to Washington.

With Moch, the little 119-pound Washington cox, pounding the handles of the rudder rope against the side of the slim cedar shell and yelling encouragement to his oarsmen, Washington slid on past the Penn shell shortly after passing the mile mark. From there to the finish line, about 400 yards away, Washington increased its lead stroke by stroke.

Phillies Beat Bees, 7-6, for 5th in Row

Philadelphia, July 5 (AP).—The Phillies knocked Ray Benge out of the box in the second inning to score five runs and go on to a 7-to-6 triumph over the Bees today for their fifth victory in as many games.

After the Phillies had piled up a 6-0 lead in the first six innings the visitors sent Jorgens to the showers. In the ninth the visitors had the tying run on third base with two out when Passeau was called in to pitch to Berger and he forced the Bees' star to bounce an easy grounder to first base.

Holland's Netmen Beat U. S. Stars

Miss Babcock and Allison Lose in Singles.

Noordwijk, Holland, July 5 (AP).—Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles, and Wilmer Allison, veteran Texan, dropped their matches today in the international tennis series between Holland and the United States.

Miss Babcock lost in straight sets to Mlle. Rollin Couquerque, 6—1, 6—2, while Hans Timmer defeated Allison, 6—4, 2—6, 7—5.

Hal Surface, of Kansas City, came through with a victory of the Americans, however, defeating H. Van Swol, 6—2, 6—3.

The Americans also won in the doubles. Mr. and Mrs. John Van Ryn turned back Mlle. Couquerque and T. Hughan, 6—0, 6—3, while Allison and Van Ryn beat Van Swol and Hughan, 7—5, 6—3.

Welsh Takes District Net Crown

Rockville Star Retains Doubles Title With McElvenny.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Barney Welsh ended his three-year campaign for the Dumbarton Bowl yesterday, adding that ancient dish to his rapidly growing collection of silverware by beating stubborn Dooley Mitchell in the final round of the District tennis championships, 6—4, 2—6, 6—2, 6—3 at Columbia Country Club. The Rockville Rifler also retained his doubles title along with Ralph McElvenny with a 6—2, 6—2, 8—6 win over Mitchell and Bud Markey.

Bearing such well-known names as R. C. Van Vliet, Clarence Charest, Dooley Mitchell and Bob Considine, the Dumbarton trophy has been the goal of District tennis titans for nigh unto 12 years now but since Barney entered the scramble three years ago its final destination has been more or less inevitable. It had to be won three times. Welsh gained his first two legs on it in 1934 and 1935.

Mitchell gave his friendly rival a busy afternoon before dropping his matches. The 27-year-old Georgetown grad used all the strategy learned in his long tennis career in an effort to stop the 23-year-old George Washington University law student as a crowd of 1,500 watched.

Dooley's Volleys Bother.

Dooley's volleying bothered Barney frequently and finally halted the match in the last set. Barney had a 3-to-1 lead and the next game was deuced when he shot a whizzing drive down Mitchell's backhand. Dooley made a stab for it and barely dumped it over the net. Welsh rushed in a mile-a-minute to make the shot and made an 8-foot slide which would have done credit to Ben Chapman.

The close caliber of the match is evident from the total point score. Welsh accumulated 137 to Mitchell's 123. Sixteen of the 35 games went to deuce.

The first set went with games going against service until the eighth, when Barney finally won his delivery. Dooley tried to slow up the tempo frequently, trying to keep Barney on the run on long rallies, but Welsh's accuracy was too good an answer. It was Dooley's driving over the baseline which finally cost him the match.

The doubles furnished the fastest

Irish Dominate Equestrian Events

By the Associated Press.

Lucerne, July 5.—For the second straight day, the Irish Free State army officers dominated the International Equine Jumping Competition today as the American Olympic team again failed to gain high ranking in the Prix du Yaint Georges.

Capt. Dan Corry, riding Red Hugh, took first as he sent his mount over the 14 obstacles, with a maximum height of 4 feet 7 inches, in 1:50 6/10. Capt. Lewis placed second with Glondars in 1:55 4/10.

Sixth place was the best the Americans could do. Capt. Carl Raguse, up on the veteran jumper, Ugly, took that position in 2:12. Capt. C. C. Jadwin failed to place with Joe Alshire, needing 2:45 8/10 to complete the course.

The rish also won the Swiss cavalry award, Commander O'Dwyer scoring in the event over Capt. Raguse, who finished second with Dakota. Maj. W. B. Bradford, leader of the American Olympic team, placed sixth on Don while Capt. Jadwin, up on Blacky, was eighth.

Miss Didrikson Shoots 81, Losing in Exhibition Golf Match

Texas Star, Mackenzie Beaten

Cox-Barnett Win, 2 Up at Congressional; Battle Is Close.

By Dave Herman.

Babe Didrikson may be the best woman professional golfer in the business, but she just isn't in the class with three of our local tutors.

The Babe, making her Washington debut yesterday before some 700 dyed-in-the-wool golf fanatics at Congressional Country Club, did all right by herself for nine holes, only to crack up on the incoming side and finish with an 81.

Roland Mackenzie, the young host club professional, was the 22-year-old Texan's partner, and they lost to the combination of Wiffy Cox, of Kenwood, and Bob Barnett, of Chevy Chase, by 2 up.

Miss Didrikson was not a disappointment with her wood shots. In this department she practically held her own with Mackenzie, Cox and Barnett, outdriving some of them on various holes.

Green Play Poor.

But where the Babe fell down was around and on the green—the green in particular. She went out in 39, thanks to a few conceded putts, and played the back nine in 42, thanks to some conceded putts. Of course, the boys were conceding 'em right along.

Cox and Barnett, each with 38—34—72, even par, tied for low scoring honors, while Mackenzie, with three out-of-bound shots, finished with 38—36—74.

The battle was close for 15 holes. At the turn, they were all even after Mackenzie and Cox had halved the eighth in birdie fours and Mackenzie and Barnett, the ninth in birdie deuces.

With three holes to go, the match even, Barnett and Cox captured the sixteenth with par fours. Mackenzie hit one out of bounds, and the Babe pulled her second, both taking fives.

Roland to Rescue.

On the seventeenth Miss Didrikson got tangled up in a trap near the green on her second shot, and it took her six, but Mackenzie halved the hole with his adversaries in four.

On the home hole, the Babe just missed her putt for a birdie. Barnett, however, rendered victory more complete by ramming in a 15-footer for a birdie three.

Miss Didrikson figured in several holes. After a 250-yard drive on the fourth, she knocked her niblick to within two feet of the pin for the only birdie, squaring the match. She used a six iron for her second shot on the par five 465-yard eighth, just missing the carpet. A five or four would have put her on in position for an eagle. But she insisted on a six. Some nerve, huh!

She had a stroke on the tenth, winning the hole with her par four. Her longest drive came on the 511-yard thirteenth, where she reeled off a 300-yarder, using a spoon for her second, and being only a few feet to the right of the green. It was on this hole that she remarked to Bob Barnett, who was a few feet in front of her with his drive, "I'll betcha a dollar I can get closer to the green than you." There was little to choose between.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 5.—Cleveland and Chicago split their double-header before 15,000 fans today, the Indians taking the opener 11 to 4 and the Sox winning the nightcap, 4 to 2. The Tribe's win saved one game out of the five-game series for Cleveland.

In the first game Mel Harder limited Chicago to nine hits as his mates collected 15 off the offerings of Clint Brown and Red Evans. Four Chicago errors aided the Tribe.

Johnny Whitehead won a pitching duel from Lloyd Brown in the afterpiece, holding the Indians to seven safeties as Brown allowed the Sox but eight. Chicago bunched four of them in the seventh, however, to score three of their four runs.

The Blue Flame Valets, last year's National City League champions and Sunday champions of the Post Sandlot Association, secured a tie for second place in the final first half standing of Section A yesterday by trouncing the Union Printers, 15 to 4, on the Ellipse.

The teams in section B dipped further into the second half race with Nolan Motors, Old Manhattan Beer, District Grocers and Junior Order of American Mechanics going into a tie for first place. The Nolan Club opened its second half drive with a 10-to-3 win over National Novelty. Nolan Motors won the first half championship.

Karl Nau and Joe Pusateri led the 21-hit attack of the Valets, each getting four. Joe Freschi did the pitching for the Blue Flames. The Valets won the ball game despite the presence of Manager Tony Baruto in right field.

Hal Kiesel, George Washington University's great basketball center, did the pitching for Nolan Motors, allowing but four hits and fanning 15. Rector, with three for three, led the Nolan hitting.

Old Manhattan took a 9-5 decision from the powerful D. C. Plumbers as Garner kept the ten Plumber hits well scattered. He had to throttle a two-run rally in the ninth when Tassa, Jones and Mitchell connected for singles in a row only to have Garner fan Pizzaro and Dunlap for the last two outs.

In other Section B games, District Grocers defeated the new member of the league, White Haven A. C., 12 to 3, and the Mechanics stopped the Ross Jewelers, 9 to 5.

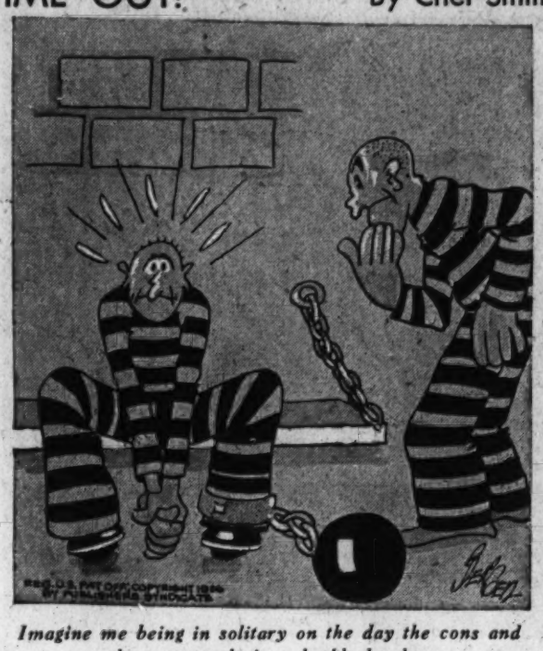
TIME OUT!

By Chet Smith



Imagine me being in solitary on the day the cons and the cops tangle in a double header.

At the Post . . .

Charles Town Race Track, July 5.

Deor Al:

I'll have to confess that I picked Dancing Mack last Friday at Suffolk Downs and he paid a $125 mutuel. I was going to pass it up but "Losing Ticket" sent me a note which read in part "As the biggest blow bag among the local selectors, I see you guessed one yesterday that paid $125. How come you didn't blow our heads off this morning?" That's what I get for trying to be modest. Sammy Palumbo goes into the final week of racing here with a one-winner lead over Lou Pikor in the race for the local jockey honors. Steward Bradley seems to have the situation well in hand here. He had to suspend Jockey Wisner yesterday but otherwise things have been quiet. And there hasn't been a disqualification of a horse at the meeting. I can't remember a case that merited taking down a number. Jockey Moe Berg will go to Empire City with the Belk horses when this meeting closes next Saturday. Apprentice Jockey L. Garrett will be a full-fledged rider as soon as he pilots six more winners. BILL.

First race—Miss Wrack seems to have found a suitable spot in this field. Hilley will do the riding, and I'm going to string along. Isle O'Joy has been getting education and could surprise here. Margaret Jones has worked well and is a possibility.

Second race—Dolly Tour showed a nice effort last out and seems ready for a set of brackets. This distance suits, and she is not too heavily weighted. Miss Toucan can better that last and is dangerous. Justa Teacher is due to awake any time now. Mabel Beyond showed early speed last out.

Third race—Channing will have Johnny Shanks to do the riding, and I'm going to take a chance. The principal threats of the field are among the also eligibles. Holland and White Cloud for the place and show. Donce wants mud.

Fourth race—Dixie Bee has been rested and could return to the races with a bang in this company. Black Sweep closed like an express train last out and will be dangerous. Lady Kiluna could take it all.

Fifth race—Titian Kiddie is fit and ready and needs only a good ride to take care of this field. Bonnie Dhu comes off a victory at a longer route, but figures here. Fred Alva, with a change of riders, will be a keen contender.

Sixth race—Thunderlee, groomed for a killing, has been sharpened in sprints and closed excellently last out. At this route I'm looking for a win. All Sorts could improve with intelligent handling. Haymulus for the show.

Seventh race—Politen drew a lot of play and did little running, but goes tomorrow at a new route. Dark Ayr should show improved form here. Three Grand is nearing top form and is about ready to score in the mud.

Best bet—Titian Kiddie.

Charles Town.

2—Mabel Beyond, Mersan, Dolly Tour.
3—Holland, Donce, Dormetia.
4—Muddy Day, Lady Kiluna, Hurdy Gurdy.

6—Busy Tony, All Sorts, Thunderlee.
7—Mount Dairy, Golden Sandals, Landsman.

Best bet—Holland.

Lefty Walter Stockwell, of Eastern High, pitched a no-hit, no-run game for George's Radio Shop yesterday to beat No. 5 Police Boys Club, 15 to 0, in a National City Junior League game. In the meantime, the Pep Boys rode into first place as they turned back the Clarendon Juniors, 13 to 2, and the previously undefeated J. C. Flood Plumbers took a 12-5 beating from Simpson's Pharmacy

Simpson's and the Radio Boys moved into a tie for second place. West End Laundry continued its rise from the cellar with a 3-2 victory over New Deal Men's Shop.

Stockwell's no-hitter was in a six-inning game, but he fanned 11 men in that short period. Capt. Larry Sullivan hit a homer for the Radio boys in the fifth inning when his team scored 12 runs. He had a perfect day at bat.

Jimmy DeChard, Eastern High pitcher, hurled the Pep Boys into first place. He allowed Clarendon 8 scattered hits. The Pep Boys collected most of their 13 hits and all of their 13 runs in the first three innings. Raymond, Pep Boy second baseman, hit two home runs and Jenkins, third baseman, hit one round tripper. Larry Hanagan, Roosevelt High shortstop, collected two singles and two doubles.

Retail Trade Expands With Bonus Buying

Vacations Also Create a Wide Demand for Merchandise.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 5.—"The general trend of business during the week was upward, with some divisions making the best showing in more than a month," Dun & Bradstreet says today. "Despite the smaller gains in the drought districts, retail distribution was advanced by the cashing of veterans' bonds and the stronger demand for apparel and vacation goods. Wholesale markets were more active, as reorders increased and fall buying gained momentum, most merchants preparing for the largest trade since 1930. While schedules were set higher in industries, there were indications of seasonal slackening in others.

"The inclining trend of the leading industrial indices became more pronounced. With a gain of 1.2 per cent electric output reached a new all-time high, surpassing the peak set in the week previous, and widening the margain over the 1935 comparative sendout to 14.5 per cent.

Oil Output Higher.

"Production of bituminuous coal practically was unchanged, the decrease for the week amounting to only 0.5 per cent, but the increase over the 1935 tonnage widened to 41.9 per cent. Rising 5,750 barrels from the preceding week's flow, daily average gross production of crude oil went 130,850 barrels over the calculations set by the Bureau of Mines.

"Advancing 3.8 points, steel ingot production went to 74 per cent of capacity, the best rate attained since May, 1930, and the twenty-first consecutive week that it has been maintained above last year's. The abrupt rise in freight-car loadings enabled all totals back to October 19, 1935, to be exceeded, and for the thirteenth straight time went ahead of the 1935 number. While lumber production declined 3 per cent and shipments 5 per cent for the week, new orders increased 3 per cent. From the 1935 corresponding figures, production was higher by 61 per cent, and both shipment and orders by 55 per cent."

Rail Credit Corp. To Distribute 2%

Substantial payments made by carriers on their loans will enable the Railroad Credit Corporation to make on July 15 a further distribution to participating carriers of $1,447,020, or 2 per cent of the contributed funds. Of this amount $803,222 will be paid in cash and $643,798 will be credited on carriers' indebtedness to the corporation.

This will bring the total amount distributed to $38,976,936, or 53 per cent of the amount originally contributed by the carriers participating in the marshaling and distributing plan, 1931.

Pre-Holiday Market Upswing Held Favorable Omen for Week

Electric Power Stocks Was the Leader in Group Advances; Trading Was at Sub-Normal Level.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 5.—A sluggish and hesitant performance by the stock market last week was partly redeemed by a pre-holiday upswing of moderate proportions on Friday.

Before then there was little evidence of bullish initiative except in the utilities and a few of the trading favorites like Chrysler and Westinghouse. These stood out against a background of heaviness in such important groups as steels, and the agricultural and merchandising shares.

Industrial News Good.

There was no lack of favorable industrial news, although the constructive side of the picture was marred a bit by talk of possible heavy drought damage to spring wheat, and increased fears of labor strife in the steel industry.

The share list showed little response to a further rise in steel operations, expansion of electric power output to a new record high, and a better than seasonal showing of carloadings and automobile production. Augmenting these developments was a further budget of favorable dividend actions.

As regards group movement, the Associated Press averages showed electric power issues outdistanced all others with a rise in the average of 1.1 points for the week. Rails finished .7 of a point lower, while industrials were down .3. Trading volume remained low.

Toward the close of the period, some traders were reported to have forsaken the share list for a fling in the much more active grain market. Wheat made large gains, principally on the drought fears, and cotton also attained new high levels for its recent move.

Prime Bonds Advance.

High-grade domestic corporation bonds mounted step by step to within easy reach of the highest levels of the last ten years last week as other divisions of the listed market fluctuated narrowly.

Continued easy money conditions and a relative scarcity of new financing combined to focus attention on the low-yield group, many of which, despite callable features and comparatively early maturities, have advanced to such high levels that the current return is almost negligible.

New offerings for the week totaled less than $100,000,000, of which the $50,000,000 Consolidated Oil debenture issued the major portion. The usual summer slackening in the capital market is expected in investment circles to be felt still more keenly in the next two months, not only in the form of strictly new financing, but in refunding operations as well.

A few of the larger utility companies are expected to come out with refunding plans within the next few weeks, and a railroad or two might possibly enliven things by replacing existing securities with lower coupon liens. The consensus in well-informed quarters, however, is that there will be a pronounced recess until around September 1, when a real swing in both refunding and "new money" issues is expected.

Chicago Deposits Set All-Time Peak

Chicago, July 5 (AP).—Deopsits in Chicago banks reached a new high record, according to figures made public in response to calls from the Comptroller of the Currency and the State auditor.

Figures for 52 Chicago banks, 23 of them national, showed deposits June 30 totaled $3,143,904,000, compared with $2,796,153,000 three months ago. A year ago deposits totaled $2,626,932,000.

Records show that never before in Chicago's history, even during the peak of the 1929 boom, have bank deposits here exceeded $3,000,000,000.

Steel Activity Is Maintained At High Level

Labor Drive Causes Some Uncertainty in the Industry.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 5.—Except for the July 4 holiday, steelworks operations last week held to a high level, and are expected to resume this week at a rate fairly close to that prevailing prior to the interruption, says Steel.

The average for the entire week was 66 per cent, down 5½ points from the preceding week. Steelmakers have a large unfilled tonnage, it being impossible for them to complete shipments on second quarter specifications before the price advance July 1. Heavy awards of structural steel featured the closing week of the quarter.

The desire to obtain protection on future construction work against third-quarter price increases resulted in a heavy volume of inquiries involving large tonnage, indicating that awards to fabricators will be extensive during the next 30 days, while shipments will hold up through the quarter.

Organized labor's drive in the industry has caused some uncertainty, but it has not become a pronounced factor in the market, consumers evidently placing little tonnage as a hedge against possible steelworks suspensions.

Operations of farm machinery manufacturers are holding at a good level for this period, despite the fact some implement plants have closed for inventories. Tractor builders are running at capacity.

Automobile assemblies for the week increased to an estimated 100,697 units, a gain of 1,000 over the preceding week. Total production for June, estimated at more than 403,000 units, was approximately 41,000 more than in June, 1935. Some initial buying of steel for 1937 models is expected soon.

Scrap appears much stronger, with Steel's price composite up 29 cents to $12.75, the first rise since a gradual decline started early in April.

Machine tool buying in the Eastern districts during June exceeded any month since 1930 and volume was well distributed.

Bank Stocks Rise 3.99% for Week

New York, July 5.—New York City bank stocks scored a substantial advance during the past week, according to records compiled by Hoist, Rose & Foster. The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues on July 3 totaled $1,821,993,000, compared with $1,752,065,000 at the close of the previous week, an increase of $69,928,000, or 3.99 per cent.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market closed the past week at slightly higher livels than a week ago. The aggregate value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on July 3 totaled $637,971,000, compared with $637,918,000, at the close of the previous week, an increase of $52,188, or 0.01 per cent.

Lumber Output 71 Per Cent of '29

The lumber industry during the week ended June 27 stood at 71 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 73 per cent of 1929 shipments, the heavy record being partly due to anticipated increase in freight costs beginning June 30. For the eleventh consecutive week, new orders were below production. Shipments showed a slight excess over output.

Reported production during the week ended July 27 of 5 per cent fewer mills was only .2 per cent below revised production figures of the preceding week; shipments were 10 per cent above, and new orders 6 per cent below, that week, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association from regional associations covering the operations of important hardwood and softwood mills.

Meat Production Up 16 Per Cent This Year

Chicago, Ill., July 5.—Production of meat in the United States in the first half of 1936 has been about 16 per cent larger than that in the same months last year, according to estimates announced today by the Institute of American Meat Packers. These estimates are based upon the numbers of livestock dressed in Federally inspected plants, and other United States Department of Agriculture figures.

Pork production in the first six months of 1936 has been approximately 20 per cent above that of the same period last year, and beef production this year is running about 19 per cent above the corresponding 1935 figures.

APPLE MARY

By Martha Orr

WELL, DENNIE, I'M GLAD I HAD THOSE UNPLEASANT EXPERIENCES IN THE STORE YESTERDAY. IT TAUGHT ME THAT CLERKS HAVE THEIR TROUBLES, TOO.
JUST LIKE MOST PEOPLE, I FIGURED THE OTHER FELLOW HAD THE EASIEST JOB, UNTIL I TRIED IT MYSELF.
YOU DIDN'T SEE ALL THE PESTS WE HAVE TO WAIT ON.
WE ALL HAVE OUR TROUBLES, BUT I GUESS WE'LL FIND OURSELVES HAPPIER WHEN WE TRY TO GET ALONG WITH THE ONES WE'RE USED TO—
YOU CAN DEPEND ON ME AND DAD FLICK TO RUN THE STORE.
AND FROM NOW ON, YOU CAN DEPEND ON ME TO STICK WITH THE OLD APPLE CART.

Dr. F. F. Daly's Funeral Service Set Tomorrow

Dentist, Native of Capital, to Be Buried in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Funeral services for Dr. Frederick F. Daly, 78, who died at Sibley Hospital on Saturday, will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at St. Matthew's Catholic Church.

Dr. Daly, a native of Washington, practiced dentistry until about a month ago in the old Oxford Building, Fourteenth and H streets, which has since been razed. He received his degree in dentistry from the old National University medical school which later became part of George Washington University. After his graduation he lectured at the school for several years.

Dr. Daly's father, John E. Daly, was one of the pioneer dentists in Washington, and his mother was Mary Dixon of the family of Mason-Dixon fame. All three sons of the couple, John A., William B., and Frederick F., became dentists. All practiced in Washington until a few years ago. At that time Dr. John A. Daly moved to New York and Dr. William B. Daly retired.

Dr. Frederick F. Daly, until he was taken to Sibley Hospital a week ago, lived at 1216 Sixteenth street. His wife, who was Miss Lucy Norman, of Philadelphia died in 1888. She was a niece of Col. Tom Florence, publisher of the Constitutional Union, one of the Capital's first newspapers.

Dr. Daly is survived by two sons, John A. Daly, of Silver Spring, Md., and Richard A. Daly, of Mount Rainier, Md., and by two brothers.

Following the funeral mass at St. Matthew's tomorrow morning burial will take place in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Funeral Is Held For Mrs. Golden

Funeral services for Mrs. Sophia Golden, of 3821 Livingstone street northwest, wife of Edwin Golden, were held yesterday afternoon at the Bernard Danzansky funeral chapel, with Rabbi Zemach Green officiating. Burial followed in Ohev Sholom Cemetery.

Mrs. Golden, who has suffered from heart disease for 10 years, died Saturday. She was 58.

Born and married in Berdichev, Russia, she came to Washington with her husband and two sons in 1907 and had lived here since that time.

Survivors are the husband, two sons, Dr. Benjamin Golden, of Washington, and A. H. Golden, of Stamford, Conn., and two grandchildren, Oudry and Merle Golden, children of A. H. Golden.

Blindfold Training Aids His Eyes

Children who have a tendency to run away from home or to play hookey from school are often the victims of "reading disability," Dr. Paul J. Ewerhardt, psychiarist and director of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, is convinced.

As a result of the cures he has effected in the last six years he has arranged classes at the Child Guidance Clinic, a part of the institute, for children suffering from the disability.

According to Dr. Ewerhardt, about 3 per cent of the boys and girls in America have difficulty in learning to read, often because they are left-eyed, seeing more clearly from right to left than in the normal manner, from left to right. Thus to them the word "dog" becomes "god" and they stumble in their reading lessons.

The psychiatrist explained yesterday that the peculiarity is more marked in left-handed children and that "reading disability" is also frequently responsible for stuttering and stammering.

The child who is unable to learn to read as fast as the others in his class usually ends by hating school and developing an inferiority complex, Dr. Ewerhardt said.

The special classes now being conducted at the institute, 1464 Columbia road northwest, are making fairly general use of the kinaesthetic method, by which the youngster is shown a large letter on the blackboard and is taught its sound. He is then blindfolded and urged to trace the letter on the board with his finger. This familiarizes him with the letter and its sound when spoken.

Classes are held Tuesdays and Thursdays with three volunteer teachers in charge, Mrs. Slocum Kingsbury, Harry S. Stockmeyer and Mrs. Irene Vladek.

Even before the classes were organized a short time ago, Dr. Ewerhardt obtained what he considers astonishing results in dealing with handicapped children. Two years ago a 9-year-old boy was brought to the clinic who was intelligent in everything but reading. While he should have been in grade 5B he still was in Grade 1A. He had played truant from school, run away from home, and finally was hailed into Juvenile Court for taking articles from automobiles.

After attending the clinic two years his reading deficiency has been overcome, he has caught up with his class at school and overcome his bad habits.

The Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, including the Child Guidance Clinic, was organized by Community Chest contributors and is supported by funds donated through the Chest.

Bank, Labor Chiefs Warn Of Inflation Trend in U. S.

Wood Asserts Spending May Unbalance Budget, Predicts Huge Deficit.

Institute Is Told Of Growing Fear

Woll Calls Government's Policies 'Unsound' in Speech at U. of Va.

By Felix Bruner.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charlottesville, Va., July 6.—Fear of impending monetary inflation resulting from the present financial policies of the Government was expressed here today by a leading banker and a leader of organized labor.

Orrin G. Wood, president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, speaking at the Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Virginia, saw grave danger in maintenance of excess reserves in the Federal Reserve system, with the accompanying low interest rates, and in excessive Government expenditures, resulting in an unbalanced budget.

Speaking from the same platform, Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, said he saw the possibility of disastrous results to working men and women in the fact that "we already have the beginnings of an inflationary movement in this country." He declared that "colossal wastes" have resulted from the "unsound fiscal policies" of the Government.

Cites Inflation Fear.

"There seems to me," said Wood, "to be two problems today so fundamental that they may effect the securities held by every investor, whether he owns his investments directly or indirectly and whether he is the holder of a fixed interest bearing security such as a bond or mortgage or is a holder of common stocks. These are, first, present low interest rates, resulting in high prices and low yields for both bonds and stocks, and second, the fear of inflation."

He pointed out that high grade bonds are selling at prices which yield the investor a lower return than has ever been known in the United States. Stocks in well-intrenched companies, he said, are selling at prices which not only bring low returns to the investor, but are discounting an increase in earnings which may take some time to materialize.

"Prime Cause."

"The prime cause of the present low interest rates," he continued, "is the large amount of excess reserves of the member banks of the Federal Reserve system."

Wood gave the prinicpal causes for the building of a large reservoir of excess reserves:

"First, there has been a subnormal demand from industry for its current uses, a situation which is normal in a depression and the early stages of emergence from it.

"Secondly, the unsettled state of continental European political affairs has brought a large flow of funds seeking investment in this country and with it a large supply of gold, so that our gold supply, on the present basis of the devaluated dollar, now exceeds the stupendous sum of $10,000,000,000.

"Thirdly, and in my judgment the most potent of all, has been the policy of the Federal Government in pursuing a low money rate policy to the extreme limit."

The extreme ease in the money market could change, Wood felt, from a demand from industry based on normal business activity and a normal growth in business, but he said he did not believe this would result in a large absorption of excess reserves. An outflow of capital to Europe, he said, might be a second method, but he added that such an outflow in the present state of European affairs seems unlikely.

"A third force," Wood said, "which might assist in absorbing these funds, would be fast-rising prices and a great speculation in any or all of the following: Stocks, commodities and real estate. This may well be a real future danger, but despite rising commodity prices there seems to me to be no signs of it today.

"Lastly and most forceful would be a reversal of the present policy of the Federal Reserve Board and the Government, with the object of increasing interest rates. This would probably take either or both of two forms—first, the sale by the Reserve banks of all or a large part of their

Italian 'Marchioness' Credited With Aid in Ending Bond Ring

Pia Ferrari Davico, Other European Notables Helped Federal Agents Capture 16, Recover Million Loot, Bureau Aid Declares.

A famous Italian beauty, Pia Ferrari Davico, was the source of information which aided Department of Justice agents in the investigation of the theft of $2,046,000 in bonds from Wall Street, it was learned yesterday.

The Associated Press reported from New York that Miss Davico and several notable European figures, including the Prince of Monaco had helped in solution of the theft, for which five men were arrested over the week-end.

The Italian woman, sometimes called the marchioness by friends, is credited with providing information which started the search in Europe and led to the recovery of $400,000 of the stolen securities in Paris.

Miss Davico, who had a villa in Monte Carlo, told friends who informed authorities that she received a tip that the stolen bonds would be available at "bargain prices" in Paris.

Without accepting the offer, she sailed for Europe, but returned here secretly in February at the request of United States Attorney Harold Frankel. Information she provided led to the arrest of a Hungarian and

British Desert League, Says Lloyd-George

Baldwin, Aids 'Ratted,' He Asserts in Fiery By-Election Talk.

Liberal Declares U. S. Has Lost Faith in English Cabinet.

By the Associated Press.

Derby, England, July 6.—David Lloyd-George in a fiery by-election speech, tonight called Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and his ministers "rats that scuttle the ship."

He denounced the cabinet particularly for its handling of international affairs, including the League of Nations and the Italo-Ethiopian dispute.

Shaking his white mane, the former premier declared:

"The battle for peace has been lost through feebleness and poltroonery on the part of the greatest nation in the world, through her leaders."

He asked: "Who ratted?"

When a man in the audience interjected: "Simon" (Sir John Simon, the home secretary) Lloyd George retorted:

"Yes, well, that's the kind of an animal he is."

Slaps at Chamberlain.

Later, referring apparently to Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, the former premier said:

"Another great minister—I am told he is going to be the next prime minister—said 'whatever happens, there will be no cowardly surrender.'"

He went on:

"They bolted. Who ratted? Rats, I am told, desert a sinking ship. These are rats that scuttle the ship."

"It is one of the calamities of the hour * * * that, at the moment you require qualities of nerve, courage, resolution, vision, perhaps more than in the days of the war, you have a government in power completely devoid of these qualities."

Depicting the spectacle of the British bulldog "who, without a single bite, not even a spot of blood, runs away with its tail between its legs," Lloyd George declared, "in Europe this government isn't thought much of; in America they have lost confidence in us."

The former premier also said Great Britain, in the face of the gravest crisis since the World War, "is flopping about from one side to the other."

"I have seen many governments," the noted liberal asserted, "but I have never seen any quite like this. If we do not pass through this greatest emergency that mankind ever has passed through, barring the World War, it will be infinitely more catastrophic than the last war."

Speaks in By-Election.

Lloyd George spoke at a meeting of the council of action for peace and reconstruction, in connection with a by-election campaign to fill the seat of J. H. Thomas, former colonial secretary who resigned from the House of Commons because of the budget scandal.

Prime Minister Baldwin's government has "wabbled so much, vacillated so much, hesitated so much, advanced and then retreated that nobody knows where this grand old country stands," said Lloyd George.

Declaring the international situation more grave than in 1914, he added.

"I remember the situation then. Two or three months before war broke out, there were none of those thunder-clouds gathering in the skies which you see now."

Clerks Warned on Strike.

London, July 6 (AP).—Faced by a threat of a "stayin" strike of 16,000 civil servants, Sir Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, bluntly served notice tonight that clerks who laid down their pens would be dismissed instantly.

A strike of the clerks, who are demanding more pay, would seriously hold up Britain's rearmament program, among other things.

"Civil servants are engaged conscientiously in the discharge of duties entrusted to them, and if such a servant indulges in a strike, he renders himself liable to instant dismissal," the chancellor declared in the House of Commons.

Meanwhile, officials and workers have accepted an offer to arbitrate.

The Civil Servants Clerical Association, the men's organization, recently consulted Sir Willilam Jowitt, noted lawyer, on the legality of such a strike.

His reply was said to have been "reassuring."

An official of the association said there was no "immediate" possibility the government offices would be occupied by strikers, but added: "There is strong likelihood of a strike, however, if the treasury refuses to meet our demands."

Departments chiefly concerned are the air ministry, the war office and the admiralty.

Lewis Cautions Steel Industry Against Strife

In Radio Talk, He Says Corporations Will Spill Blood, Blame Labor.

By Sidney Olson.

With a pledge to unionize the 500,000 steel workers of the country "legally and peacefully," John L. Lewis, leader of the country's industrial unions, last night told a national radio audience that the steel corporations will "deliberately provoke strife and bloodshed" and will "attempt to place the blame on labor."

Lewis, calling upon the workers of the country to join "in the battle for industrial democracy," outlined the issue at stake in the looming struggle as "whether the working population of this country shall have a voice in determining their destiny, or whether they shall serve as indentured servants for a financial and economic dictatorship which would shamelessly exploit our natural resources and destroy the pride of a free people."

His great brows frowning, the boom-voiced labor leader plunged into a 30-minute address over the blue network of the National Broadcasting Co., replete with such phrases as the "economic tyrants," the "steel overlords," the "money-changers in the temple," and "the brutal and ruthless forces of the Operation Fails To Aid Cadman; Cleric Sinking

Peritonitis Develops and Further Complicates His Illness.

By the Associated Press.

Plattsburg, N. Y., July 6.—Dr. Lyman Barton, jr., who operated on Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, noted radio preacher, tonight for a ruptured appendix, said peritonitis had developed and further complicated the illness of the 71-year-old Brooklyn clergyman.

Dr. Cadman withstood the operation "very well," Dr. Barton said, and was resting comfortably.

The physician said he had found it inadvisable to remove the appendix because of the weakened condition of Dr. Cadman, who was placed under a local anesthetic for the operation. Dr. Barton said a drain had been inserted and the minister's condition now "must await developments."

Dr. Cadman was stricken last night during an address on world peace at the Methodist Episcopal Church.

His personal physician, Dr. Alfred Buist, of Brooklyn, arrived at 7 p. m. for a consultation with Dr. Barton. He was taken to the operating room of the Champlain Valley Hospital a short time later.

Dr. Cadman is pastor of the 17 Leaders of Military Revolt Are Sentenced to Die in Japan

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo (Tuesday), July 7.—Seventeen leaders of Japan's bloody February coup were condemned to speedy death today by a high military court.

There is no appeal. Hense the 17, two of them captains in the Emperor's proud army, probably will be shot in a few days.

With the powerful war minister, Gen. Count Juichi Terauchi, presiding, the court also handed down sentences of life imprisonment for 5 conspirators and ordered prison terms ranging from 18 months to 15 years for 44 noncommissioned officers and 8 civilians.

Sentences of 27 lesser offenders were suspended.

The charges were murder, rebellion and disobedience to the commands of the Emperor himself and by the punishment they meted out the military leaders of Japan disclosed the strength of their will to stamp out the cult of assassination and direct action which has flourished among the army's younger officers since the Manchurian conquest of 1931.

Heading the list of those sentenced to die for the bloody incidents in which three elder statesmen were cut down in their homes and Keisuke Okada, then premier, missed death by minutes, was Capt. Teruzo Ando, of the Third Infantry Regiment.

Ando, with Capt. Shiro Nonaka, allegedly shared command of the insurrection. Nonaka killed himself; so did Flight Capt. Hishashi Kono. Ando tried to do the same, but was merely wounded, and recovered.

The others who must die, all former officers or cadets in the Mikado's army, were: Capt. Kiyosada Koda, First Infantry Regiment; Infantry First Lieuts. Yashuhide Kurihara, Motoaki, Nakahasni, Seichu Niwa, Naoshi Sakai, Katsuo Tsushima, Tsuguo Takeshima; Artillery First Lieut. Masaru Tanaka; Infantry Second Lieuts. Hachiro Hayashi, and Taro Takahashi; Artillery Second Lieut. Yu Yasuda; Engineer Second Lieut. Britain Displays Holy Land Power

Jerusalem, July 6 (Palcor Agency).—British troops concentrated military operations around Nablus today in an effort to convince Arab terrorists of the strength of government forces and thus to end disorders of the past eleven weeks.

The operations were the most extensive in Palestine since the World War. They were carried out in a large area in which some of the bloodiest encounters of the present disturbances have occurred.

Five battalions of infantry, tanks, armored cars and planes engaged in the movements, contacting each other by field wireless. All regular radio programs were suspended to prevent interference.

Mercury at 119-Degree High As Drought Spreads Misery; U. S. Advises Livestock Sale

Conserve Feed Supplies for Foundation Herds, Arid States Told.

Roosevelt Holds New Conference

Bids for Processing of Cattle for Relief Distribution Drafted.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday discussed the latest drought developments and relief proposals with Rexford G. Tugwell, resettlement administrator, and Aubrey Williams, assistant works progress administrator. Tugwell said another conference would be held and that the President might have an announcement to make then.

Late in the day, Jesse W. Tapp, chairman of the Ariculture Department drought committee, wired Governors and agricultural extension service directors in the Dakotas, Montana and Wyoming that it would be advisable for farmers to sell their surplus livestock and conserve feed supplies for the maintenance of foundation herds and the feeding of milch cows.

The committee announced specifications for bids on the purchasing and processing of cattle which may be bought by the Government were approved and would be sent to Midwest packers and canners. The cattle will be processed for relief distribution. Bids must be in by July 15.

Payments to Be Made.

George E. Farrell, Western regional AAA director, said a report might be ready today for AAA Administrator Howard Tolley, suggesting the amount of benefit payments for farmers whose seeded soil-conserving crops did not grow or were damaged by the drought. He said there probably would be no question that payments would be made to many who seeded legumes, but that it still was undecided whether to make part or full payment on green fertilizer crops which did not come up.

In any event, he said, the "No. 1 payment," benefits for retirement of 15 per cent of the farmer's cultivated acreage, would be made. He said the first payment also would be made to farmers resettled under the plan of voluntary surrender of lands definitely arid.

Meanwhile, reports that the drought had seriously lowered the underground water table, an important source of moisture, prompted the Geological Survey to begin an intensive study of fluctuations in the Dakotas, Montana and Wyoming.

Water Table Drop Noted.

Farrell said, on his return from an inspection tour of the parched area, that there had been a very serious drop in the water table.

"The drought, while covering much smaller territory than in 1934," he said, "is far more dry, resulting in a very serious drop in the water table. Work projects for distressed farm labor contemplate a system of small dams which will do a lot of good in conserving surface water."

There were unconfirmed reports that overpumping for draining water and irrigation had sunk the water table below the point of capillary attraction to the root zone in some sections.

Geologists to Co-operate

Oscar E. Meinzer, the Geological Survey's authority on underground water supplies, said field men in the drought area had been instructed to co-operate with Army engineers in studying fluctuations.

Approximately 15 papers prepared on the subject for the American Geographical Union, he said, have been sent to the Government Printing Office and will be made public within the next few days. They are expected to disclose whether surface reservoirs may have to be constructed because of a decline in underground water supplies.

Ex-Sailor Spy Gets 15-Year Sentence

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, July 6.—Harry Thomas Thompson, convicted of spying on the United States fleet for a Japanese agent, was sentenced to 15 years in prison today—the first American penalized under the spy law written during the World War.

Thompson, discharged Navy yeoman, was convicted last week of selling naval secrets to a Japanese, identified in a joint indictment as a lieutenant commander of the imperial Japanese navy.

Judge Leon R. Yankwich, who fixed the penalty—the law allows a maximum punishment of 20 years—said Thompson was America's first convicted peace-time spy.

A dozen other prisoners also awaiting sentence, drew away from Thompson as he was placed beside them. A scarred, hard-looking fellow with a shock of black hair curled his lip in a bitter sneer as he looked at the clean, well-dressed Thompson.

Thompson kept his eyes straight ahead, his face immobile.

Navajos Revive Rain Prayers And Gods Send Them a Deluge

Ancient Rites Invoked by Tribal Sage Bring Indians Showers.

By the Associated Press.

Ganado, Ariz., July 6.—The Navajos' two-day prayer for rain ended today—and showers fell on the 15,000,000-acre reservation.

Splashes of rain added to the grotesqueness of the weirdly painted braves as they brought to a close their two days and nights of shrill chanting and intricate dance.

Then the venerable wise men, who alone knew and remembered the all-powerful Najadaltinth ritual, led a solemn parade to a mountain peak near here.

There a final appeal—the burying prayer—was made to the god of rain.

Bits of shell and fine turquoise were wrapped in small parcels to be hidden in the rocks as homage to the great spirit.

Confident their pleas in behalf of their thirsting range lands and drying water holes had been heard, the trek of the thousands afoot, by horseback and wagon back to their homes was started tonight.

To many of the Indians, the Najadaltinth was only a legend, heard from the lips of "old men" or read in the mystic signs of sand paintings.

It was revived after a generation by Beninie the Winker, most venerable of the wise men, when drought reports came from the far reaches of the extensive reservation.

In relays the braves danced and sang in shrill cadences through the night and day and another night, beeseching their gods that the drought might end.

Ceremonial rattles were shaken

in the face of Chindi, evil ones living in the parched air. Others waved feathered wands, beating down the unseen devils.

And today the rain came. It pounded in the Tohatchie and Fluted Mountains and pelted the parched plains with scattered showers.

A smile wreathed the face of the aged "wise one" as he sat smoking tonight.

"The Najadaltinth is still all-powful," he said.

Borah Remains In G. O. P. Fold; Backs Platform

Silent on Own Campaign for Re-election; Friend Says He Will Run.

By the Associated Press.

Boise, Idaho, July 6.—Senator William E. Borah pledged allegiance today to the Republican ticket and platform.

"I have no intention of bolting the ticket," said the veteran Republican, adding:

"I am supporting the platform and I have been supporting the platform from the beginning."

Thus, in a long-awaited clarification, Borah removed the expressed doubts of many leaders from Boise to Washington regarding his stand in the campaign.

At Topeka, Kans., the Republican Presidential nominee, Gov. Alf M. Landon, said, "I am happy to have the co-operation of Senator Borah in this campaign."

"I long have admired his distinguished career as a great American statesman," the Governor continued.

Borah still withheld definite announcement of his intentions regarding a sixth term—but he did not deny a friend's flat statement he will run again.

The friend, W. Scott Hall, of Malad, Idaho, a follower of the "Lion of Idaho" for 25 years, said after a conference:

"I am convinced Senator Borah will be a candidate for re-election."

The expectation of some friends is that the 71-year-old statesman will come out definitely within the next few days. July 11 is the deadline for filing nomination petitions in Idaho.

Hall disclosed that petitions for Borah are in the hands of a lawyer friend.

E. C. Davis, Idaho Townsend manager, said today the time is past for Senator Borah to receive the pension organization's indorsement for re-election.

Action Is Likely Today on Jobs Held by Farley

Postmaster General, Roosevelt Confer; Latter to Issue Statement.

President Roosevelt today will disclose the political future of his lieutenant, Postmaster General James A. Farley, the latter indicated yesterday afternoon following a two-hour luncheon conference at the White House, shortly after the President returned from his Virginia tour.

The Postmaster General told reporters as he emerged, mopping his brow, that the President will announce the results of yesterday's conference at his regular press conference today. He was noncommittal as to what the announcement will reveal.

Observers expect the President either to announce Farley's resignation from the Cabinet or a four-month leave of absence from his job as Postmaster General. The latter is considered the more likely. It is known that the President has had Farley's resignation in his desk for many months, and that he needs only to pen a letter of acceptance.

Farley's resignation has been rumored almost weekly for more than two years, as political opponents have continued to build a fire of criticism under him for his occupancy of three posts at the same time—the Postmaster Generalship, and the chairmanships of the Democratic National and New York State Committees.

Apparently he is to retain both of the latter jobs. Faced with the task of re-electing President Roosevelt, he will probably direct his energies specifically to that task, and shelve his own ambitions for the Governorship of New York until 1938.

With Farley and the President at the lengthy luncheon was L. W. (Chip) Robert, jr., newly appointed secretary of the Democratic National Committee.

If Farley resigns or takes a leave of absence, it appears that William W. Howes, of South Dakota, first

Elsie Janis to Sell Possessions And Devote Her Life to Charity

By the Associated Press.

Tarrytown, N. Y., July 6.—Elsie Janis, actress and "idol of the Army" during the World War, has announced her intentions of giving up all her "worldly possessions" and devoting her life to charity.

In a letter to the editor of the Tarrytown News, the 47-year-old heroine of many a stage triumph said she plans to auction off her house and all her "so-called important souvenirs and valuable knick-nacks" at the end of the summer and spend her time entertaining veterans in Government hospitals.

"I am giving up everything I have except the talent, personality, pep, or whatever it was that put me in the money as little Elsie, and kept me there for 30 years," the letter said.

"She said she would conduct the auction herself and give the proceeds to local charities. Provision will be made for servants of the estate, Upper Manor House, and the estate itself will be sold only for use for some "public charitable purpose, such as a museum, school or playground."

"For all old Mammon could wave at me I would not sell the manor to a private owner. These great old trees have sheltered selfishness long enough," the letter concluded.

Miss Janis made her professional debut at the age of 5. Soon after the death of her mother, who had been her constant companion during stage years, in 1930 she announced her retirement from the theater.

After writing her biography she went to Hollywood to write film dialogue and there was married to Gilbert Wilson, a former actor and now a bond salesman.

Both were injured in an automobile accident a year ago, and since then she has spent most of her time at her estate here.

No Rain in Sight for at Least 36 Hours, Assert Weather Experts.

WPA Jobs Started By 3,000 Farmers

Grain Prices Reach New Peak; Part of Canada's Crop a Total Loss.

The Drought Situation.

Another day burned its way across wider reaches of the Central States yesterday with record-smashig temperatures as high as 119 degrees.

Grain prices, in feverish activity, reflected the spreading drought destruction and shot to the ceiling of the fluctuation limit on exchanges. The speculative buying demand was halted until today.

President Roosevelt discussed with RA and WPA officials possible relief steps to be rushed by the Government.

Jesse W. Tapp, chairman of the Agriculture Department drought committee, wired Governors of stricken States that farmers should sell their livestock and conserve feed supplies.

Bitter denunciation and hearty approval of Relief Administrator Hopkins' plan to move families from the drought areas of five States were heard.

Reports that the subsurface water level in the affected area had been lowered alarmingly brought hints of the approach of a desert condition over that immense region.

Arizona Navajo Indians' two-day prayers for rain were followed by showers.

Mercury at 119 Degrees.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 6.—The tempo of the drought's sweeping drama was quickened today as 100 to 117-degree heat beat mercilessly down for the fourth straight day over much of the Midwest.

The General Weather Bureau Office at Washington said no rain was in sight for the grain States for another 36 hours after three days of what it termed the "most trying and damaging period of the drought so far."

Grain prices skyrocketed to new peaks of the season and to limits for one-day fixed by trading rules of domestic futures markets. Trading was at a standstill until the markets open today.

Heat Records Fall.

Heat records for many years standing were melted down today. The first detachment of more than 2,000 North Dakota farmers seeking WPA jobs to sustain their families went to work in temperatures the highest of the year in many places.

Most of North Dakota was intensely hot, with Fort Yates, in Sioux County, recording an official 119 degrees.

Temperatures only one degree lower were recorded in Napoleon and Jamestown, both deep in the State's drought zone. The official maximum of 118 at Napoleon topped a 47-year mark.

Other North Dakota temperatures were officially: McClusky, 117; Valley City, 116; Bismarck, 114, and Devils Lake, 112.

Highways were reported "blowing up" in parts of Illinois, where 100-degree heat was general outside Chicago.

With temperatures of 100 degrees general in Iowa, Ray Murray, State agricultural secretary, said Iowa would ask inclusion in the drought aid program if dry weather lasted through the week.

An official Canadian statement said the dry hot weather had brought about a total loss of crops in southern and southwestern Saskatchewan.

Weather Bureau forecasters said it was likely new seasonal highs for much of the heat belt would be recorded. Yesterday a new all-time high of 119 was reached for the vicinity of Kennebec, S. Dak.

Relief Agencies Accelerated.

State relief agencies stepped up the pace of their activities.

Montana officials announced a State-wide drought conference at Havre Wednesday. G. W. Fowler, deputy WPA administrator, said it would build about 800 small water storage reservoirs in the arid area. The Nebraska WPA began a survey to determine the needs of stricken farm families. The 3,000 indigent farmers who began work in North Dakota, Wyoming and Montana on

Dr. F. F. Daly's Funeral Service Set Tomorrow

Dentist, Native of Capital, to Be Buried in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Funeral services for Dr. Frederick F. Daly, 78, who died at Sibley Hospital on Saturday, will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at St. Matthew's Catholic Church.

Dr. Daly, a native of Washington, practiced dentistry until about a month ago in the old Oxford Building, Fourteenth and H streets, which has since been razed. He received his degree in dentistry from the old National University medical school which later became part of George Washington University. After his graduation he lectured at the school for several years.

Dr. Daly's father, John E. Daly, was one of the pioneer dentists in Washington, and his mother was Mary Dixon of the family of Mason-Dixon fame. All three sons of the couple, John A., William B., and Frederick F., became dentists. All practiced in Washington until a few years ago. At that time Dr. John A. Daly moved to New York and Dr. William B. Daly retired.

Dr. Frederick F. Daly, until he was taken to Sibley Hospital a week ago, lived at 1216 Sixteenth street. His wife, who was Miss Lucy Norman, of Philadelphia died in 1888. She was a niece of Col. Tom Florence, publisher of the Constitutional Union, one of the Capital's first newspapers.

Dr. Daly is survived by two sons, John A. Daly, of Silver Spring, Md., and Richard A. Daly, of Mount Rainier, Md., and by two brothers.

Following the funeral mass at St. Matthew's tomorrow morning burial will take place in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Funeral Is Held For Mrs. Golden

Mrs. Golden, who has suffered from heart disease for 10 years, died Saturday. She was 58.

Born and married in Berdichev, Russia, she came to Washington with her husband and two sons in 1907 and had lived here since that time.

Survivors are the husband, two sons, Dr. Benjamin Golden, of Washington, and A. H. Golden, of Stamford, Conn., and two grandchildren, Oudry and Merle Golden, children of A. H. Golden.

Children who have a tendency to run away from home or to play hookey from school are often the victims of "reading disability," Dr. Paul J. Ewerhardt, psychiarist and director of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, is convinced.

As a result of the cures he has effected in the last six years he has arranged classes at the Child Guidance Clinic, a part of the institute, for children suffering from the disability.

According to Dr. Ewerhardt, about 3 per cent of the boys and girls in America have difficulty in learning to read, often because they are left-eyed, seeing more clearly from right to left than in the normal manner, from left to right. Thus to them the word "dog" becomes "god" and they stumble in their reading lessons.

The psychiatrist explained yesterday that the peculiarity is more marked in left-handed children and that "reading disability" is also frequently responsible for stuttering and stammering.

The child who is unable to learn to read as fast as the others in his class usually ends by hating school and developing an inferiority complex, Dr. Ewerhardt said.

The special classes now being conducted at the institute, 1464 Columbia road northwest, are making fairly general use of the kinaesthetic method, by which the youngster is shown a large letter on the blackboard and is taught its sound. He is then blindfolded and urged to trace the letter on the board with his finger. This familiarizes him with the letter and its sound when spoken.

Further progress is made, according to the psychiatrist, by adding a letter at a time, each letter forming a new word, and the child is taught to read normally from left to right.

Classes are held Tuesdays and Thursdays with three volunteer teachers in charge, Mrs. Slocum Kingsbury, Harry S. Stockmeyer and Mrs. Irene Vladek.

Even before the classes were organized a short time ago, Dr. Ewerhardt obtained what he considers astonishing results in dealing with handicapped children. Two years ago a 9-year-old boy was brought to the clinic who was intelligent in everything but reading. While he should have been in grade 5B he still was in Grade 1A. He had played truant from school, run away from home, and finally was hailed into Juvenile Court for taking articles from automobiles.

After attending the clinic two years his reading deficiency has been overcome, he has caught up with his class at school and overcome his bad habits.

The Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, including the Child Guidance Clinic, was organized by Community Chest contributors and is supported by funds donated through the Chest.
